CRASH WIPES £200M FROM KENT FUNDS

Pension fund for 40,000 county workers takes hit from US mortgage crisis

STOCK market falls have knocked about £200 million off the value of a pension fund for 40,000 public sector workers in Kent.

By Friday, the crisis in the US sub-prime mortgage market had resulted in the value of the UK's leading shares dropping by £128 billion in just over a week.

As a result, around 10 per cent of a £2bn chunk

Finance chief: market crash is 'short-term blip'

"very worrying development", but he believed it was a short-term blip.

The pension fund was worth about £2.6bn in mid-July, with approximately £2bn of that in equity – stocks and shares.

"We're probably looking at the value of the equity holding we had in the fund dropping by something in the region of 10 per cent," he said.

"It's definitely something that's very concerning to us, we're very much on the ball with the managers and committee to be alert to what is happening... but we've seen events like this before and we know that subsequent to them, markets do bounce back very strongly."

Mr Vickers said the scale of losses will be discussed at a meeting of the scheme's superannuation committee in September.

"We'll review if there's any action that we need to take," he said.

The committee is made up of county councillors, a Medway councillor, district councillors and pensioner, union and staff representatives.

Mr Vickers emphasised that the average returns on equities during the last three years had been very strong – 18 per cent per annum.

"I think this is a short-term market correction. We will ride this out."

He added that pensions already being paid out were guaranteed by law.

London's FTSE 100 and the index of leading UK shares both dipped in the wake of the US sub-prime mortgage crisis. The sector offered higher-risk loans to people with a poor credit history.

A growing number of borrowers have defaulted on their loans, not least due to rising interest rates in the US, with a widespread knock-on effect on markets around the world.

Chancellor Alistair Darling said on Friday that Britain's economy should be able to weather the financial storm.

"The UK economy is strong and stable," he said. "The global economy is also strong at this time."

"We have built over the last 10 years a very strong economy which has withstood shocks in the past and we should have confidence in it in the future."

Nightclub scents it's on a good thing

CLUBBERS at a revamped nightclub in Ashford will be greeted with the smell of flowers and freshly cut grass.

In a bid to combat the smell of stale alcohol and body odour left in clubs since the smoking ban came into force, the owners decided to pump a sweet smelling scent into the Liquid and Envy through the air-conditioning unit.

The nightclub, situated in an old flourmill, launched on Friday after a £500,000 refit.

Its owners, Luminar, surveyed 3,000 people across the country to find the nation's favourite smells – the results led to the creation of Hydro-Spa – the aroma that will fill the Kent nightspot.

General manager Nick Jackson said: "The introduction of Hydro-Spa will mean we will offer a full, multi-sensory experience to our clubbers."

Charities get benefit from lost property

KENT Police is giving thousands of pounds raised from selling unclaimed lost property to worthy causes in east Kent.

It gave £250 to the Thanet branch of mental health charity Mind, which will be spent on an allotment area which uses horticultural therapy to aid recovery.

Mary Chambers, general manager of Thanet Mind, said: "We are grateful for any donation which helps us carry on supporting people in Thanet with mental health issues."

Kent Police is donating £3,000 to worthy causes in east Kent this summer. The donations are being made from its property fund, which is the money made from selling all unclaimed lost property.

Ukip may gain disgraced MEP's seat

THE UK Independence Party could regain a seat in the European Parliament belonging to an MEP it fired three years ago.

Ashley Mote, 71, who was elected as a Ukip MEP for the South East in 2004, was convicted on Friday of 21 charges of fraud, following a four-week trial.

The father-of-two was found guilty of eight charges of false accounting, eight of obtaining a money transfer by deception, four of evading liability and one of failing to notify a change of circumstances.

Mote began claiming income support, housing and council tax benefits after a business of his collapsed in 1989, but failed to tell the authorities when he started to earn money through different enterprises.

He received £73,000 in benefits between February 1996 and September 2002, Portsmouth Crown Court heard.

A date for sentencing is yet to be set.

Nigel Farage, leader of Ukip, told Kent on Sunday that if Mote was jailed the party would be given back his seat.

Ukip sacked him after discovering the court charges pending against him and he became an independent MEP.

Mr Farage said MEPs' seats revert to the party under which they were elected if they are jailed.

"Hopefully, Mr Mote will shortly be replaced with a Ukip MEP for South East England."

'Incredible evening' at Tap'n'Tin

Doherty wows fans in Chatham pub

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

FANS of Pete Doherty came from as far away as Italy, Belgium and Scotland to see the rock singer perform at a pub in Chatham.

More than 300 people crowded into the Tap'n'Tin to see him play tunes from his former band The Libertines and current group 'Babyshambles' forthcoming album, Shotter's Nation.

And he is set to return to the venue at an as yet undecided date with Cockney pub rockers Chas and Dave.

Chris Pritchard, events manager at the Tap'n'Tin, said the gig last Saturday made for an "incredible evening".

Banned

He added: "He was a joy to watch. He made it particularly memorable for one girl in the front row by playing happy birthday to her. She had driven down from Inverness after all."

Doherty, who is currently banned from London by a court order, gave out ice lollies to the crowd and performed covers ranging from The Modern Age by The Strokes to Karma Chameleon by Boy George.

As well as his fans, two members of indie band The View had driven down from Dundee to see the show.

John Terry, the manager of the Tap'n'Tin, said the gig was originally arranged after Doherty rang up the pub and asked if anyone could help him get on the bill at the Electric Gardens music festival, near Faversham.

It was too late, but they managed to get him tickets and he agreed to play at the Tap'n'Tin the following weekend.

Mr Terry told Kent on Sunday that Doherty had fond memories of the pub from when he played a 'reunion' gig with the rest of The Libertines after being released from prison four years ago.

"He's certainly keen to come back to the venue. It's a bit like coming home for him because he did the reunion gig in 2003."

He said a date was being arranged for Doherty to return to Chatham to play with Chas and Dave.

And he said that Doherty, who is famous for his on-off relationship with supermodel Kate Moss and his drug problems, appears to have cleaned up his act.

"He certainly showed no signs of being worse for wear. He was looking good."

There was no sign of Miss Moss at the concert.

Injured cadet is to get married

AN Army officer cadet who suffered multiple injuries in a mystery fall at Sandhurst military academy is to marry her boyfriend after he proposed at her bedside.

Amii Calway, 22, from Dover, is believed to have fallen from a second floor window in the early hours of August 13 – just before she was due to graduate as an officer in the Royal Corps of Signals.

She was taken to Frimley Park Hospital, Surrey, in a critical condition and a male officer cadet was arrested and questioned by police on suspicion of attempted murder.

It emerged this week that her boyfriend David Freeman, proposed to the former Dover Girls' Grammar School pupil at her bedside and she accepted. Mr Freeman, 25, received the Sword of Honour this week – given to the most outstanding cadet on each course.

The 25-year-old cadet arrested by police has been released on bail. On Friday, the Ministry of Defence Police were still waiting to formally interview Miss Calway about her fall.

Another Aussie water company

A UTILITY firm that supplies water to 620,000 people in Kent could end up in Australian hands.

Sydney-based infrastructure investment group Macquarie is planning a bid worth up to £4 billion for Southern Water, it has been reported.

Southern Water, which has about 2,000 staff, supplies water to more than one million households in Kent, Sussex, Hampshire and the Isle of Wight. It treats the sewerage of 1.4 million people in Kent.

Macquarie headed up a consortium of investors to buy Thames Water last year for about £8bn from German power company RWE.

Mid Kent Water, which supplies 580,000 people, is already owned by the Australians – through Hastings Funds Management Ltd.

Kelly's word about fashion

KELLY Brook is writing a book about her life and her love of fashion, it has been revealed.

The actress and model has spent the last few months producing 250 pages for the book, which will be called Life Style.

The revelation has been greeted with surprise as Miss Brook famously had problems reading the autocue when she was a presenter on TV's Big Breakfast.

Her new book is said to be pitched somewhere between the recent books by Coleen McLoughlin and Victoria Beckham.

Co-written with fashion writer Karen Kay, it has the subtitle Make The Best Of What You've Got and will cost £18.99.

Ian Marshall, publishing director at Orion, said: "Some of it is autobiographical and some of it is advice from Kelly about clothes."

Miss Brook, who is from a working class background in Rochester, is also set to appear on BBC1's Strictly Come Dancing next month.

And before Christmas, the aspiring businesswoman will launch her first perfume.

It is a busy time for the 27-year-old who recently signed a two-year extension with New Look for her swimwear and lingerie collection.

It is predicted the combined new projects will earn her £5million, on top of what is an already a sizeable fortune.

A friend said: "She's minted. She does not make a big deal of it, but financially speaking she's very successful."

Miss Brook, who has been dating the actor Billy Zane for four years, spends much of her time at her new home – a 15th century converted farmhouse in Grafty Green, near Lenham.

Majority of MEPs want treaty vote

Calls for public to have say in EU referendum

MOST Kent MEPs would like to see a referendum on the new EU reform treaty.

The document, which was approved by European leaders in June, replaced the EU constitution, which was rejected after votes in France and Holland two years ago.

Published in English for the first time this month, the 277-page treaty dropped the idea of an EU foreign minister, while Britain was given an opt-out on justice and human rights issues.

But critics argue that the document is no different to the earlier constitution, except in name.

A poll by Kent on Sunday showed that six of the South East's 10 MEPs are in favour of a referendum.

Daniel Hannan, Tory MEP, prides himself on being the first person to call for a referendum on the European constitution.

He claimed the EU reform treaty was no different and would give the European Union a head of state, foreign office and diplomatic core, a legal system, as well as the "legal personality" of a sovereign state, which would allow it to join the UN and negotiate treaties.

The bottom line, he said, was that the Labour Government had promised a referendum in 2004 and 2005, so that pledge should be fulfilled.

Nirj Deva, another Tory MEP, described the treaty as an attempt at a "power grab".

He added: "The constitution – to give it its correct name – hands Brussels even more power over our day-to-day lives, from rules governing the hours we are allowed to work to our children's education."

"In substance, the treaty is identical to the constitution that was killed by France and buried by Holland through their national referendum."

Nigel Farage, MEP for the UK

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

Independence Party, agreed. The Ukip leader, who lives in Downe, Bromley, said: "We need a referendum, in order to prevent the formation of a mega-state with Britain embedded in it like a fly in a spider's web."

Caroline Lucas, Green Party MEP, said a referendum was needed not only so the Government honoured its promise, but also to spark a "long-overdue" national debate about the future of the EU and Britain's role in it.

However, Peter Skinner, Labour MEP, said that Britain has never had a referendum to ratify an international treaty before and it was "ludicrous" to suggest one should be held over a treaty that only proposes "modest" changes.

He added: "Britain has a long tradition as a parliamentary democracy – like previous treaties, the proposed reform treaty should be scrutinised, debated and voted on in the Houses of Parliament."

Sharon Bowles, Liberal Democrat MEP, said she would welcome a referendum in an "ideal world", but believed it was impossible. Rather than encouraging debate, the suggestion of a referendum had stifled it, so its ratification should be left to Britain's Parliament, she said.

A spokesman for the Foreign Office refuted claims that the reform treaty was the same as the EU constitution and said there would be no transfer of power away from the UK on "issues of fundamental importance to our sovereignty".

He added: "In the British democratic system, Parliament is the right place for debate and decision."

ISSUE: Treaty has replaced EU constitution

Why fast cars are bad for your ears

MOTOR racing fans have been warned of the risks to their hearing of standing near a track for too long.

With the British Touring Car Championship at Brands Hatch yesterday and today, a local hearing expert is alerting people to the dangers of prolonged exposure to the roar of the engines.

The powerful engines of racing cars can produce up to 120 decibels – 50 per cent higher than the 80 decibels recommended by the Health and Safety Executive, said Richard Hammond, hearing aid audiologist at Specsavers' hearing centre in Orpington.

He said people could protect their ears from noise exposure without spoiling the enjoyment.

"Your ears can be damaged if exposed to loud noise for longer than 15 minutes, but this can be easily avoided if hearing protectors are fitted by a professional."

Murder victim 'knew his killers'

OFFICERS investigating the murder of a 45-year-old man in Ramsgate say he was attacked by people who knew him.

Police are carrying out house-to-house inquiries and have called for witnesses to come forward.

Wayne Greenidge, who was unemployed, was found collapsed on the ground on the Newington estate following the incident outside the Cherry Orchard pub on Monday at 7.40pm.

He was taken to the Queen Elizabeth Queen Mother Hospital in Margate but later died of his injuries.

Chief Superintendent Peter West said: "It appears Mr Greenidge was attacked by people who knew him."

He called for anyone at the pub or in the area at the time to come forward. Call the police on 01622 654 850 if you have any information.

Still without broadband

BRITISH Telecom has admitted that there are still 'not-spots' in Kent where people cannot receive broadband.

That is despite spending millions of pounds to upgrade telephone exchanges across the county.

One of the places where residents still cannot get the high-speed internet service is the village of Tilmanstone, near Dover.

But Lisa Finn-Holden, vice-chairman of Tilmanstone Parish Council, said that she recently had someone from BT call and wrongly tell her that broadband was now available.

"How many people signed up because it was a call from BT, thinking we now have broadband?" she asked. "I thought this was very poor of the company."

A spokeswoman for BT confirmed that broadband was still not available to people in Tilmanstone. She said the nearest exchange was too far away.

"We check each line on its merits, but unfortunately we cannot provide broadband to this customer at this time."

"We have spent millions of pounds in Kent upgrading all the county's exchanges to deliver broadband and continue to strive to find solutions to the so-called 'not-spots'."

The spokeswoman said it was currently too expensive to do the work necessary to allow Mrs Finn-Holden and other villagers to have broadband.

Keep litter inside your vehicles

IT costs £500,000 a year to clear litter from Kent roads.

The Highways Agency said 1,000 tonnes a year are collected from country highways – the equivalent of 500 skips.

The figures were released as the agency launched a campaign to fight the problem of motorists dropping litter across England.

The Bag it, Bin it initiative is being backed by the Campaign to Protect Rural England.

Drivers are being encouraged to put rubbish in bins – rather than throwing it from car windows.

Barry Westwood, of the South East Highways Agency, said: "Money spent on clearing litter thrown from vehicles could be better spent in reducing congestion and improving safety."

Revealed: unrest at special needs policy

Parents fight to win SEN statements for their children

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

NEARLY 80 appeals were made last year against decisions to refuse children with learning difficulties a legal entitlement to special needs education, new figures show.

Parents and schools appealed to a special tribunal after Kent County Council turned down their applications for a statutory assessment.

These assessments are needed for children to be given a statement of special educational needs.

Statements entitle special needs children to services such as access to special schools or units within mainstream schools, one-to-one teaching support or full-time assistance.

The data shows that 79 appeals were made to the independent special educational needs and disability tribunal.

Of these, 13 went to tribunal and 51 cases were agreed with parents or carers before a hearing. Fifteen parents or carers withdrew their appeal. Six of those that went to tribunal led to statutory assessments, resulting in five statements.

Independent education advisor Peter Read, a former headmaster, said Kent has the highest proportion of appeals to tribunal per head in the country, outside London.

He said: "There is immense Government pressure to keep the number of statements down.

"As a result local authorities are also working to keep the number of statements down and one consequence is there are a lot more parents applying to independent tribunals to resolve their problems," Mr Read said.

Each tribunal hearing costs the taxpayer between £2,500 and £4,500.

The current government policy on special needs education is for inclusion, which means that most children with learning disabilities must be educated in mainstream schools.

Trend

KCC has said it bucks the trend nationally, by keeping as many special needs places as possible.

Last year, there were 1,017 referrals for assessment in Kent. The county council issued 613 new statements.

According to the Times Educational Supplements, 20 per cent of UK primary school pupils wait more than two years for a statement.

The Kent figures were obtained by Adam Holloway, the Conservative MP for Gravesham, whose constituent Sonia Gammon has been fighting to get a statement for her son, Brent.

She has twins, who both have learning disabilities, but only one, Brad, has been able to get a statement.

Mrs Gammon appealed against KCC's decision not to give Brent a statement in September last year.

A hearing planned for December 2006 was cancelled and the case is now due to go before the panel in October this year.

Mr Holloway said: "It is a big national problem. For many children it is good they are in mainstream schools but they cannot address the needs of every child."

"Everyone can see there are children in danger of going really badly off the rails."

"The cost to the country, not to mention the waste to their lives, is huge [just] to save money early on when they are nine or 10 years old."

A spokesman for KCC said: "We're always very conscious that every child's needs are different and take our responsibility in law for identifying the best school for a child seriously. Many opportunities [exist] for parents to have their say about their child's needs for support."

A-levels are not always the answer

MORE youngsters should be encouraged to take practical courses and apprenticeships instead of A-levels, according to a business leader.

Frazer Thompson, chairman of the Kent branch of the Institute of Directors, said A-levels and university were not the right route for all students.

Instead, they should be given greater encouragement to take more practical courses, which would help address the UK's skills shortage, he said.

"The solution to the country's educational crisis is not A-levels. The solution is actually that not every child should need or want to go to university.

"There are other forms of tertiary education which would be more appropriate for some children, which are not well communicated in schools."

Mr Thompson said rather than A-levels, more young people should do practical courses and apprenticeships after their GCSEs.

He added: "What we want are young people who don't necessarily want an academic life, but what they want is a practical life of making a positive contribution through business."

"We're finding that more children are not learning the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic and they're disillusioned with the education system, they feel they're failing. I think business can teach them that anybody can make it in business."

A-level results, which were out on Thursday, were up on last year, with one in four students achieving a grade A across the UK.

Figures from the Joint Council for Qualifications showed the number receiving A grades in England, Wales and Northern Ireland had gone up 1.2 percentage points from 24.1 per cent in 2006 to 25.3 per cent this year.

There was an overall percentage rise in the number of grades A to E awarded – up 0.3 per cent, from 96.6 per cent to 96.9 per cent in 2007.

Initial indications of results for thousands of pupils at Kent's schools were "encouraging", according to local education authorities.

But for pupils whose results were not as good as predicted, help is at hand both from tutors and from Connexions Direct, who can be contacted on 080 800 13219 or online at: www.connexions-direct.com.

Alternatively, students can contact the National Results Helpline on 0808 100 8000.

■ TWINS who both gained five grade As at A-level have been left confused after only one of them won a university place.

Tania and Mahua Bhaduri, 18, from West Malling, who want to study medicine, got As in biology, chemistry, French and mathematics at Tonbridge Grammar School for Girls. Tania also took psychology and Mahua studied geography.

However, whereas Mahua was offered a place at Imperial College London, her sister will have to re-apply in 2008 after being turned down by universities including Oxford, Sheffield and Bristol.

Their father Dr Bim Bhaduri, a consultant paediatrician at Maidstone Hospital, branded the system a "lottery".

A DOCTOR stabbed to death in a frenzied knife attack in her driveway may have been stalked for days before her murder.

Dr Victoria Anyetei, 53, was attacked as she climbed into her car in Teynham Road, Dartford, to go to work on Tuesday morning.

Police believe the killer was lying in wait for the well-respected medic, who was a consultant paediatrician at St Thomas' Hospital in London.

At a press conference on Friday, officers revealed that the murderer may have visited her house in Dartford before and watched her.

Senior investigating officer Detective Chief Inspector Anne Brittain, speaking at an incident room set up for the murder in Chatham, said: "The attacker may have been to the house before.

Watched

"If she had been targeted for a reason we do not yet know, this has to be a consideration that her house had been watched.

"Any sightings of anyone hanging around or strangers in that area would be of interest to us.

She added: "If she was being targeted there is a possibility that her attacker was waiting for her to come out of the house.

"It is not a through road so people would not be just walking through it.

"If it was a random attack the person responsible may have been in the road for a particular reason or have a connection to that area."

The killer could have been on foot or using a car. They would have been covered in blood after the attack and may have been cut or scratched in the struggle, said police.

One possibility being looked at is that she was targeted by a former patient or their family.

But police have not ruled out that it was a random attack by a crazed knifeman.

Detectives believe the murder took place at 7.30am after neighbours heard a car horn. Her body was found in the front seat of her silver Toyota Avensis by her teenage son at 10.30am.

In a statement, Dr Anyetei's family paid tribute to a "dedicated mother and loving sister".

They said: "We are very shocked and upset and feel a great loss. Victoria was a very kind-hearted and helpful woman who was a dedicated mother and loving sister. She was loved deeply by all of us and will be terribly missed."

The team of 20 officers hunting the killer are keeping an "open mind" as to the motive.

'Eco city' that will eat up our greenfield land

THE TORIES have unveiled plans for a new "eco city", powered by renewable energy and complete with a "highly efficient" public transport system.

A policy group chaired by the former Conservative cabinet minister John Redwood and Simon Wolfson, chief executive of the Next fashion group, said it should be built on land between the Docklands and Medway towns.

But they admit their proposals for 100,000 more homes and three million square metres of extra commercial and industrial space could eat up some greenfield land.

A Conservative Party spokesman said: "It is widely recognised that the area of old industrial low-lying riverside land and some green territory that lies between the Docklands in the west and the Medway towns in the east offers the most scope for growth."

The Tories said sea defences should be reinforced and tidal power could be harnessed to provide power for new homes and businesses.

But the Campaign to Protect

Rural England described the report, which was commissioned by Tory leader David Cameron last year, as "confused and contradictory".

A CPRE spokesman said: "A number of its core recommendations would have damaging environmental consequences, including for England's precious and threatened countryside."

Cllr Glyn Griffiths, deputy leader of the Labour group on Medway Council, said: "This is another ridiculous suggestion from the Tories - building homes that, if this summer is anything to go by, will be under water in ten years."

Meanwhile, a think-tank has said that two million homes will have to be built on greenfield sites to meet Prime Minister Gordon Brown's pledge to build three million houses by 2020.

Peter Randall, managing director of Kent property experts RPC Land and New Homes, said: "There are not enough brownfield sites to accommodate housing targets and that leaves only one solution to build on greenfield land."

New recycling targets are set with £4.5m deal

KENT County Council has awarded major contracts worth £4.5million to waste management companies in a bid to drive up recycling targets.

The authority has 18 household waste recycling centres run by private companies and 50 per cent of the rubbish is currently being recycled.

Its aim is to increase this amount to 60 per cent within five years to meet the Kent Waste Partnership strategy.

The partnership was formed in April this year and is made up of Kent's district and borough councils that are responsible for collecting waste and KCC, which is responsible for disposing rubbish.

It developed a strategy for how household waste in the county will be managed over the next 20 years.

Three companies - Biffa Waste Management, based in Buckinghamshire, Verdant Waste Management, in Sevenoaks, and the John Slattery Partnership in Erith - have been given contracts for 12 of the centres.

John Slattery and Biffa held previous contracts for KCC's recycling centres.

The council's environment spokesman said: "Contracts are reviewed on a regular basis as part of KCC's ongoing commitment to provide the best possible services to its residents.

"These companies will be encouraged to increase the recycling figures with financial incentives and penalties if the recycling figures do not meet targets.

"The contractors will need to increase interaction with the public at the site and staffing levels in order to achieve these aims."

Crisis in prisons

PRISON officers have voted to strike unless their pay demands are met.

The Prison Officers' Association (POA) is livid that a pay rise of 2.5 per cent in April, as proposed by an independent review board, was rejected by Whitehall.

The Government instead offered a rise of 1.9 per cent.

Kent has more prisons than most other English counties.

Colin Moses, national chairman of the POA said: "The morale of staff throughout England and Wales is at rock bottom.

"Prisons are bursting at the seams, the level of assaults against staff has risen to more than eight a day and in turn the prisoner to staff ratio has also risen.

"The Government must take action to restore the members' confidence in their employer."

Choir goes home

THE choir from the Milton Margai School for the Blind was due to return to Freetown today after a successful three-week fundraising tour of England and Wales.

The choir played a memorable concert at Canterbury Cathedral at the end of last month.

The concert, organised by Kent on Sunday, raised £3,000 for the pioneering school.

KoS readers have this year helped support the country, which is the second least developed in the world, with books and educational materials.

Meanwhile, Sierra Leone's landmark elections last weekend were "generally well-administered, peaceful and competitive", according to the European Union.

But the EU urged patience in the wait for certified results and called on parties to resolve any disputes peacefully.

A second round of presidential votes may be needed if no candidate emerges with 55 per cent of the total vote.

The polls were the first since UN peacekeepers left the former crown colony two years ago after an 11-year-old rebel war.

Sighs of relief after foot and mouth scare

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

FARMERS are hoping the region will be free of foot and mouth restrictions within weeks.

Dairy farmer Stephen Furnival received the all-clear after tests for the disease on some of the 300 cattle he keeps at Romney Marsh came back as negative.

Temporary control zones around his farm and another suspected outbreak at Chessington World of Adventures were lifted on Wednesday night.

Fears were raised that foot and mouth had spread to Kent after the disease was confirmed at a farm in Surrey on August 3. A ban was immediately brought in on all livestock movements across the whole of the UK.

This week, however, Chief Veterinary Officer Debby Reynolds announced an easing of movement restrictions and a timetable for removing remaining red tape, as long as there are no further outbreaks.

The South East branch of the National Farmers' Union is optimistic that all restrictions will be removed and livestock markets will be able to resume by September 10.

Sandra Nichols, NFU South East's senior food and farming adviser, said: "Farmers cannot afford to relax their guard but they can take heart from the latest developments.

"It is extremely important for everyone

HERD THE NEWS? Chief Veterinary Officer has announced easing of movement restrictions involved that we get back to normal as soon as possible to limit the damage this outbreak is causing."

Michael Howard, Tory MP for Folkestone and Hythe, said he was relieved to hear the farm in Romney Marsh had been given the all-clear.

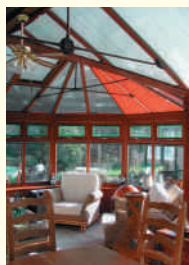

"I fully understand how devastating this disease is," he said.

"I must congratulate the farmer, Stephen Furnival, on his vigilance. It must have been of great concern to him when he discovered that three of his cows had developed symptoms which were so similar to foot and mouth.

"I share with Mr Furnival, his family and my other farming constituents the huge sigh of relief that the tests on his cattle did not prove positive."

Manston training flights row

Flying restrictions removed from aviation authority document

EXCLUSIVE

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

A NUMBER of restrictions on training flights at Kent International Airport have been removed from official documents of the aviation industry regulator.

Infratil, the airport operator, reduced the number of conditions that appear on the Civil Aviation Authority's pilot guide following an increase in traffic at the Manston airport. The company did not tell Thanet District Council of the changes.

The controversial flights have been increasing in regularity according to residents who say they are noisy, polluting and low flying.

The revelation will increase the pressure on Thanet District Council to bring in enforceable regulations.

Impunity

Labour councillor Richard Nicholson, who lives in Ramsgate, said: "This is why it is so important the council gets its head out of the sand and starts meeting with Infratil to get this sorted out."

"There are set routes designed to keep the flights away as much as possible from areas where people live. But they are ignoring the route completely and that is what people are so angry about. They seem to be doing it with impunity."

Flight activity and its impact on the surrounding environment is controlled by an agreement between the operators and the council, called a section 106.

Thanet council chiefs say there are no restrictions on training flights in the document, but opposition councillors dispute this.

Cllr Nicholson told Kent on Sunday the agreement must be renegotiated.

AIRPORT BOSS: Matt Clarke of KIA

This week, two documents from the Civil Aviation Authority were passed to this newspaper. The first is dated December 2005 and lists a number of conditions on training flights.

It includes the following: "No training flights between 1800 and 0700 local; a maximum of two hours training by any one aircraft in any one day. If operator wishes to fly for more than two hours, there must be a compulsory 30 minute period on the ground before commencing the second training detail; only one aircraft to use the aerodrome."

In the second document, dated February 15 2007, these conditions are missing. Other more general conditions remain.

The documents are headed "local traffic regulations" and come from the CAA's Aerodrome Information for Manston.

A statement from Matt Clarke, the general manager of Kent International Airport, said: "This is an extract from a pilot information manual, not a CAA regulation."

"The information is provided by airport management based on the airport's operational capability, which has increased considerably since December 2005."

"Instead of having detailed guidelines in the pilot information manual, we believe it is better to deal with each training request on its merits."

He said the airport was fully compliant with the section 106 agreement and strict procedures were applied to all traffic using the airport. Training flights, he said, were a normal part of airport operations and were vital for airlines, pilots and traffic controllers.

He said flight activity at Manston was "relatively low" at present, compared to airports like Gatwick.

He added: "A thriving, successful airport is a major focal point, employer and economic contributor to any area and we hope to rely on local support as we work to attract new services, which in turn will create jobs and encourage inward investment."

"The KIA Consultative Committee meets on a regular basis and plays an important role in ensuring that issues of concern in the local community are addressed."

The council said management and enforcement issues surrounding the section 106 agreement will be discussed by the overview and scrutiny committee over the next year.

Leader of Thanet District Council, Sandy Ezekiel, said: "The 106 agreement relating to KIA was entered into voluntarily by both sides, the council and the airport operators. Any renegotiation will be dependent on future development plans and we will keep the position under review."

WITH warm weather, live entertainment from the vanguard of the folk music scene and musical workshops, Broadstairs Folk Week has been hailed as a resounding success.

More than 120,000 people enjoyed the event that took over the town with performances held on the beaches, in bars and cafes.

Special

Festival director Jo Tuffs said the highlight was the amazing atmosphere.

"Every single generation was here – it was not exclusive when you went to a dance or concert. That's what made it so special."

Bellowhead, winners of BBC Radio Two's Best Live Act at the 2007 Folk Awards, played a sold out concert at the festival.

Another success of the week was the Bufay Collective who performed as part of a project exploring the difference between early classical and folk music in a project funded by the Arts Council.

Their concerts were packed out as they played instruments – including the harpsichord and the harp-like psaltery – from the 15th and 16th centuries.

"The shows were very beautiful and civilised," Mrs Tuffs said.

She said the weather helped attract visitors to the festival.

"It has been absolutely fantastic. For the start we had brilliant weather it was great and it meant everyone came out for all our outdoor events. The atmosphere in the town was buzzing.

"It got a bit windy and wet mid-week but the weather was soon back to a nice, jolly and happy festival vibe," she added.

Movie legend from silent era

By NICK AMES

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MICKEY Rooney, one of the greats of the golden age of Hollywood, comes to England for a series of shows later this month.

The 86-year-old star, who has appeared in films with Judy Garland and Audrey Hepburn, will appear at Folkestone's Leas Cliff Hall with his wife Jan, a singer, on Friday, August 31.

Speaking from his home in Ventura County, California, Rooney revealed how he was building up to the dates.

Still a great fan of the older movie classics, he said he has been drawing inspiration from the silver screen, the countryside, remembering his life and achievements as well as rehearsing new material.

"We're thrilled to be coming back to England," he told Kent on Sunday.

"I was there in the war when I was a soldier and I loved the place then – still do.

"English audiences certainly know how to have a good time. Recently I had the honour of meeting your Queen. It was at a reception in Washington DC. I asked to kiss her hand and of course she was charming."

Born in Brooklyn, New York, on September 23, 1920, Rooney made his debut on screen aged just 17 months. "It was a non-speaking part," he added.

A career during the golden age of Hollywood saw him perform alongside the legends of the movie world.

He is credited with suggesting 'Marilyn Monroe' as a better name than Norma Jeane Mortenson for an actress he appeared with in a film called The Fireball.

CHILD STAR: Mickey Rooney

Some even claim Walt Disney named his most famous creation Mickey Mouse in honour of his then friend – changing it from the 'Mortimer Mouse'.

"I have done around 350 films in all – the last was with Ben Stiller and it's called Tropic Thunder.

"We get on well – we worked together on Night at the Museum where I played a character called Gus, a security guard.

"The feeling I get from films is the same as it's always been. I started off in the silent era and the feeling I have towards the business is still the same.

"When you work on a movie set it's like a giant family. It's an intense experience which you all live – camera crews, make-up artists, lighting people, directors, actors and everyone else.

"Performing – that is what I do and that is what Jan does. It's in our blood. And the great thing is we are still together after 35 years – that's my proudest achievement."

Pair attempt abduction

PARENTS and young people have been told to be vigilant after the attempted abduction of a 16-year-old girl in Tonbridge.

Two men in a dark-coloured car tried to abduct the teen as she walked along Shipbourne Road last Sunday evening.

The man in the driver's seat shouted at her to get into the car as a man on the passenger side tried to grab her at around 11pm.

Officers said there was a struggle as the girl tried to free herself from the grip of the man and a male jogger helped her get away.

Police asked for witnesses to come forward.

Both men are white, in their early 20s, with local accents and smelt strongly of alcohol.

You've got email stress

EMAILS at work are increasingly seen as a source of stress, according to new research.

A survey found 34 per cent said they felt stressed by the number of emails they received and felt compelled to stop what they were doing to answer them immediately.

More than half said they checked their email inboxes at least once an hour, while more than one third checked for new messages every 15 minutes.

Dr Karen Renaud, of Glasgow University, said: "Email is an amazing tool, but it's got out of hand. You want to know what's in the message so you break off what you're doing to read it – and you've lost your train of thought."

Hospitals' poor hygiene shock

VERMIN, food stored at dangerous temperatures and staff with poor personal hygiene are some of the worrying problems found in hospital kitchens in Kent.

Official inspection reports, released under the Freedom of Information Act, flag up cleanliness issues at the William Harvey Hospital in Ashford, Erith and District Hospital, Queen Mary's Hospital at Sidcup and Whitstable and Tankerton Hospital.

The NHS trusts responsible for the hospitals have sought to reassure patients that the problems have been addressed.

Adult cockroaches were found in the kitchens at Ashford by inspectors last year and the 2007 report found more of the insects.

The East Kent Hospital NHS Trust said the information was based on two out-of-date reports.

The cockroaches were found in traps put down as a routine precaution and were dead, said the trust.

Mice were found at Erith hospital's tea-room, food handlers were found to have poor hygiene and the washbasins were not being used regularly by inspectors found. Oxleas NHS Foundation Trust said the hospital was used as an outpatient clinic only.

At Queen Mary's food was stored at wrong temperatures and "miscellaneous items" were found, which could contaminate food.

The trust said kitchens are run by catering contractors Aramark and plans have been put in place to address hygiene issues.

At Whitstable and Tankerton hospital, a metal bin used for storing milk powder was found without an effective lid, which could lead to the growth of food poisoning bacteria, along with dirty equipment.

Eastern and Coastal Kent Primary Care Trust said the problems had been rectified.

Match to remember two friends

FIFTEEN police and community support officers took part in a memorial football event in honour of two youth workers.

The game at Sidcup Youth Club, Burnt Oak Lane, was played in memory of James Herring, 16, and Richard Gough, 25.

James, who originally organised the game as a friendly match between the police and youth club members, died in a car crash in Dymchurch two weeks before.

Mr Gough died of a heart attack during a trip with a group of teenagers from the club.

On the evening of August 2, officers from Bexley's Safer Neighbourhoods Policing Teams played an 11-a-side 90-minute game against the youngsters all aged between 13 and 18 years of age.

The youngsters won 4-0.

The police were joined by members of Charlton Veterans Football Club for a second game, which ended in a draw.

Hidden abuse of the elderly

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

A SHOCKING catalogue of abuse towards elderly people in care homes and hospitals has been revealed in a new report.

A national inquiry by MPs and peers uncovered examples of bullying, incorrect use of medication, rough treatment and sexual assaults.

The Joint Committee on Human Rights condemned the evidence of neglect, with the report declaring: "Elder abuse is a serious and severe human rights abuse which is perpetrated on vulnerable older people who often depend on their abusers to provide them with care."

"Not only is it a betrayal of trust, it would also, in certain circumstances, amount to a criminal offence."

In May, Kent on Sunday revealed that of 359 nursing and personal care homes inspected in the county, three had to have enforcement action taken against them, 30 were rated 'poor' and 106 were rated as merely 'adequate'.

The figures, which were provided by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), led the charity Age Concern to claim standards at Kent's care homes were "just not good enough".

This week's report found that on average, UK care homes failed to meet 21 per cent of national standards.

It unearthed evidence of breaches including staff talking about private medical matters in front of residents and patients left lying in their own urine and excrement.

Some people were too afraid to complain about their maltreatment and there was a "lack of leadership" from the Department for Health and Ministry of Justice.

An "entire culture change" is needed to transform the system, said the MPs and peers who compiled the report.

They also called for an overhaul of current legislation which means private and voluntary care homes are not bound by the Human Rights Act.

Cllr Kevin Lynes, the county council's cabinet member for Kent adult social services, blamed the cases of abuse and neglect of care home residents partly on the CSCI, which he said did not carry out enough inspections.

He said: "I often speak to people who will say in care homes their last inspection was a year or two years ago and that CSCI were going to come along, but they've put it off."

There are 9,900 places at Kent's care homes. Cllr Lynes said the Government should provide extra cash to allow CSCI to carry out more inspections.

"CSCI as a body could be doing more," he added.

Oliver Mills, managing director of Kent adult social services, is responsible for standards at all the county's care homes.

Vulnerable

A spokesman for CSCI said that inspections were carried out according to how good or bad care homes were previously assessed to be. The worst care homes were inspected more frequently than the best, he said.

"The aim is to target our resources where they are most needed."

The spokesman also pointed out that only eight per cent of care homes in the South East did not meet privacy and dignity standards.

CSCI said it would welcome an extension of human rights legislation to people in private and voluntary care homes.

Gary FitzGerald, of the national charity Action on Elder Abuse, said the report showed too little is being done to protect old people in care homes and hospitals.

He added: "There remain too many providers who are cutting corners at the expense of vulnerable older people."

In a statement given to KoS, health minister Ivan Lewis said the Government regarded abuse of vulnerable and elderly people as unacceptable and was determined to root it out.

"Everyone who lives in a care home or is being treated in hospital has a right to feel safe and expect their dignity to be respected."

THE Government has failed to adequately respond to a mental health pandemic meaning elderly people are not being supported properly, according to Age Concern.

More than 3.5 million old people across the UK who have mental health problems are not receiving the services they need, it said.

The report said mental health problems affect many more people in later life than previously believed. It revealed up to 2.6 million older people – one in four people over 65 and two in five people over 85 – are suffering from depression.

Meanwhile, total debt for Britain's over-65s has hit £57 billion, a study from investment company Scottish Widows found.

DRIVERS can test their knowledge of the Highway Code at a roadshow touring the county.

The Kent and Medway Safety Camera Partnership relaunched its 'game show', Know the Limits, at Bluewater Shopping Centre on Friday.

Those who know their stuff about speed limits, stopping distances and speed cameras will have the chance to win a digital radio and be entered into the free draw for a pack containing a digital camera, webcam and camcorder. The show will Rachel Wall, spokeswoman for the Kent and Medway Safety Camera Partnership, said: "The success of previous Know the Limits shows were so encouraging that we wanted to be able to bring the event to more people.

"We have developed a fun, unique and informative way of educating motorists about which speed limits apply to which road and in which vehicle plus much, much more."

Hollywood 'white-hot'

BIKER BOY:
Matt Damon in
The Bourne
Ultimatum

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

MATT Damon has worked with some of the biggest directors around.

In The Departed he joined forces with Martin Scorsese, who won an Oscar for its direction.

He starred in Steven Spielberg's war epic Saving Private Ryan and Steven Soderbergh's Ocean's trilogy.

But he reserves some of his highest praise for British director Paul Greengrass, who grew up in Kent. The Bourne Ultimatum, directed by Greengrass and starring Damon in the title role, opened nationwide at cinemas on Friday.

At a press conference at Claridges in London, Damon paid tribute to Greengrass.

Kent on Sunday asked Damon what made Greengrass different to other directors he has worked with and why he enjoyed it so much.

"Paul's style about not interfering in what's happening - it comes out of his documentary film-making," he said.

Of Greengrass's decision to direct The Bourne Ultimatum, Damon said: "That was my cue to sign up because he didn't need to direct the third Bourne film. He's about as white hot as you can get in Hollywood standards."

Realistic footage

So it's not surprising to hear they are planning to work together on the Iraq war drama, Imperial Life in the Emerald City, based on the book of the same name. Damon is also happy to admit he would jump at the chance to be reunited with Greengrass for another Bourne film.

actor tells KoS why Greengrass is best

Greengrass, 52, who grew up in Gravesend and won a scholarship to Sevenoaks School, was nominated for the Best Director Oscar last year for the United 93, about one of the aircraft hijacked on September 11, 2001.

Before then, he was responsible for a string of acclaimed, documentary-style films including The Murder of Stephen Lawrence (1999) and Bloody Sunday (2002).

Damon gave an anecdote about how during shooting in Russia for the new film, Greengrass ensured the actor was allowed to play a scene the way he wanted to.

He explained how the scene was one in which Bourne is shot and he wanted to do it one way, but someone else on set advised that he did it differently. When Greengrass heard the discussion he rushed over and insisted Damon play it the way he wanted.

Damon also praised how Greengrass mainly uses hand-held, rather than fixed cameras. He said the cameras reacted to the action, instead of actors having to constantly be aware of the cameras' movement, making the footage more realistic.

Joan Allen, who plays conscientious CIA team leader Pamela Landy in Bourne, said: "Paul certainly gave us the opportunity to make these characters more interesting than you would normally find in an action film."

Greengrass, who also directed the last Bourne, said he wanted the films to be believable.

Vitality

"The character is not a fantasy character. He's a real man in a strong contemporary landscape, he's a character with depth and the world is urgent. The storylines feel like they're ripped out of tomorrow's newspapers."

One of the scenes in The Bourne Ultimatum was shot at Waterloo Station in the middle of normal crowds of people.

Greengrass said: "A Bourne film is chaos like you've never seen. Setting action sequences in places like Waterloo, Tangiers and to a lesser extent New York, you can't behave like a big movie there."

"You're forced to make it up as you go along and live off the land. It gave us a kind of vitality."

And Damon agreed. He said: "It helps the urgency and paranoia of the performances because we're out there in the middle of everything."

Seated together at the press conference on Wednesday, it was obvious from their body language that Damon and Greengrass get on well, the former even finishing the latter's sentences.

In many ways it is an unusual match. Damon came to the fore with Good Will Hunting, for which he and Ben Affleck wrote the screenplay. The feel-good hit was followed by roles in Saving Private Ryan, The Rainmaker and The Talented Mr Ripley.

Their intellect is something they have in common. Damon dropped out of Harvard to pursue an acting career and Greengrass was educated at Cambridge University.

Greengrass' first work as a director was on the current affairs programme World in Action in the 1980s. He also co-authored the controversial bestseller Spycatcher (1987) with the former assistant director of MI5, Peter Wright.

Blown away

Damon admitted he had never heard of Greengrass when he learnt he was due to film The Bourne Supremacy.

But he said: "After watching Bloody Sunday I was blown away. I had to work with Paul Greengrass."

Improving travelling in Kent

Your one-stop guide to information and advice on travelling

‘Cut your speed, not your licence’

Each year, over a third of fatal and serious crashes in Kent, involve drivers aged between 17 and 24 – that’s 250 a year. The way many young people chose to drive makes them vulnerable.

Kent Highways Services’ latest campaign is set to raise awareness amongst new drivers about the risk of losing their licence in the first two years of driving. ‘Cut your speed, not your licence’ will educate new drivers on the various ways that penalty points can be received, to help them avoid losing their licence and to become more responsible drivers. New drivers are on probation for the first two years after passing their test. If they receive six points within that period they will lose their licence, have to reapply for a provisional licence and retake both their theory and practical test.

Six points isn’t a lot, for example, it’s only two speeding offences. The campaign includes posters at buses stops and on billboards, carrying the message ‘Cut your speed, not your licence’, as speeding is probably the most common way to receive penalty points. Mock driving licences are also being handed out to young drivers, in various town centres, which, when opened up, reveal the many ways a new driver can receive six points in the first two years.

Over 20,000 new drivers in the UK lost their licence between May 2006 and April 2007 as a result of accumulating six or more points in their first two years of driving.

Keeping ditches clear

As you know, we’ve seen exceptional rainfall in the last few months. In many rural areas, the roads have been designed for the rain to drain into ditches by the side of the road.

Almost all of these ditches are the responsibility of the land owner, which includes their cleaning and maintenance. To ensure that we keep the roads as safe as possible, and to make sure that the heavy rainfall does not adversely affect the travelling public, farmers and land owners are asked to check the ditches they are responsible for and clear them if required.

If you spot a ditch that you think needs attention, please let us know on 08458 247 800.

Time to start pruning!

With all the rain we’ve had, we’re sure you’ve noticed how your grass and plants are growing very quickly this summer, and now that the sun is finally out, their growth is even more rapid!

This growth is affecting the plants and hedges on the roads too. It may surprise you to know that although Kent Highway Services is responsible for cutting the grass on verges, nearly all of the hedges and fencing that are next to the roads are not owned or maintained by us.

If your land or property is next to the road and there is a hedge, tree or other plants that are overhanging the road or pavement, it is your responsibility to keep the vegetation cut back. It is essential that this is done, as it can dramatically affect road safety for all users, including pedestrians, horse riders and cyclists.

We are particularly worried if you have vegetation that obscures a road sign, visibility at a junction or bend, or causes pedestrians to have to walk in the road. Kent Highway Services has the power to enforce land owners to cut vegetation if safety is compromised. However, it is far better all round if this work is done willingly, to ensure everyone is safe.

If you are undertaking work next to the road, please make sure you keep yourself and others safe.

If you need to arrange traffic signals or other temporary arrangements for traffic, please call 08458 247 800.

M-way job is a matter of life and death

DARREN Darby has one of the most dangerous jobs in Kent.

In the last seven-and-a-half years, two of his colleagues have died at work.

The father-of-two from Dover is a roadworker, responsible for marking out roadworks and clearing up after accidents in all weathers on one of Europe's busiest routes, the M20.

He has been pulled out of the path of cars by workmates after drivers failed to see him – and has done the same for them.

The 34-year-old has to put up with abuse from motorists and even had objects thrown at him. He has seen cars driving through roadworks at more than twice the 50mph speed limit.

Unsurprisingly, his fiancée, Nadine, is not too keen on what he does for a living.

"She does worry," he said. "I think she'd rather I did not do it sometimes."

Mr Darby called on drivers to take greater care when approaching roadworks and to obey speed limits.

"What we want people to be aware of is that there are real people working behind the cones," he said. "We've got families. I've got my nine-year-old and one-year-old and fiancée."

"We're normal people and we could do without the safety issues."

Nationally, 10 road workers have been killed and dozens injured on motorways and major roads in the last four years – all because of motorists' carelessness.

Kent's status as the Gateway to Europe means its motorways are among the busiest – and most dangerous for roadworkers – in the country.

Mr Darby said one of the worst parts of his job is putting out the first traffic cones for motorway roadworks.

"That's easily the most scary bit," he said. "There are people coming at you at 70mph who haven't paid any attention to the signs telling them to slow down."

"The cones won't stop them hitting you."

Two of Mr Darby's workmates have been killed in recent years after being struck by drivers not paying attention to the road.

One was working on a road in Surrey a few days before Christmas in 2005.

Eye-opener

"It brought back the fact that it could happen to any of us. Some of the guys didn't want to go back onto the network anymore after that."

The second worker was on the M20 putting out cones when someone crashed into him.

"It's a bit of an eye-opener," said Mr Darby. "It makes you wonder, 'do I really want to be in this job?' It does make you contemplate your future and career."

No motorists like roadworks but some are able to deal with the hold-ups better than others, said Mr Darby.

"If there's congestion at roadworks tempers are going to flare. We're the focus for their frustration."

As well as hurling abuse at him and other road workers, Mr Darby said drivers have thrown everything from apples and drink cans to batteries and parts of mobile phones.

Truckers even play a game to

see how close they can drive to traffic cones, frequently knocking them over and coming precariously near to the workers, he said.

And an added danger was from lorry drivers who had exceeded the amount of time they should be on the road.

"We're not saying all the drivers run beyond their driver hours, but some of them do."

Felicity Drewett, a Kent manager for the Highways Agency, said that motorists should appreciate that roadworks were vital to stop the network falling into "dangerous disrepair".

She added: "People need to appreciate the speed limits are there for a purpose and they're not there to inconvenience them."

On average, there are between 3,000 and 4,000 roadworkers on motorways and major A roads at any one time around Britain.

Roadworker Safety Week began on Monday as part of National Motorway Month.

Men top of speeding poll

EIGHT out of 10 motorists drive too fast on motorways – and men are more likely to be offenders.

Research among 4,000 UK motorists for insurance firm www.yesinsurance.co.uk found nine out of 10 men admit to exceeding the 70mph speed limit.

Nearly two thirds (63 per cent) said they have gone over 100mph on motorways.

Just over three quarters (77 per cent) of women admitted to breaking the speed limit, while a third (36 per cent) said they have broken 100mph.

Airport's place in aviation history

AVIATION began at Rochester Airport nearly three quarters of a century ago.

In that time, the site has produced several numerous civil and military aircraft of note.

The airport secured its place in aviation history with the creation of such acclaimed craft as the Shorts S29 Stirling Bomber – the first four-engine bomber to serve in the RAF – as well as the Empire and Sunderland flying boats.

Aircraft production began in Rochester in 1913 when a seaplane works was established. The success of aircraft production soon meant that an airfield was urgently required.

Between 1933 and 1934, following Rochester City Council's acquisition of 120 acres of farmland for a municipal airport, a lease was recommended and consent to build an aerodrome was granted by the council and Air Ministry.

On June 9, 1934, the first air service out of Rochester began, offering an hourly ferry service to Southend Aerodrome. The fares were eight shillings (about 40p) for a single ticket and 12 shillings (60p) for a return trip. The journey time was just 12 minutes.

The first and, for a short time, only private pilot to use Rochester Airport was Gladys Batchelor, whose prominent local industrialist father had built her a hangar on site. From a family of wealthy aviation enthusiasts, Gladys was the youngest female pilot licence holder in the country.

By JAMIE MCGINNES

Amy Johnson, the first woman to fly solo from England to Australia, also had links to the airport, having flown alongside Miss Batchelor. Johnson was crowned Empire Air Queen in Rochester City Corporation's inaugural Empire Air Week and Carnival in the autumn of 1936.

In 1938, in the months leading up to the outbreak of World War Two, the Air Ministry established the No 23 Elementary and Reserve Flying Training School at Rochester Airport to train RAF volunteer reservists.

Prototype

An administration block and hangar were built and just three months later the school expanded to accommodate the training of Fleet Air Arm personnel.

However, on the day before war broke out a year later, the training school transferred to Belfast.

A display flight by a half-scale prototype of the soon-to-be-famous Stirling Bomber in 1939 led to an order for 100 of the aeroplanes and production at Rochester gathered pace.

Inevitably, the airfield and its buildings were prone to air attack after the fall of France and due to its position, Rochester would have been the first aircraft factory to fall into enemy hands in the event of a Nazi invasion.

The airport was heavily bombed in August 1940, despite the best efforts of the 33rd Battalion Kent Home Guard and the Spitfires of 54 Squadron, devastating the factory and runways. As a result, production of the Stirling was delayed by at least a year and to the detriment of Rochester, the work was ultimately moved to other parts of the country.

Civil activities and those of the renamed Reserve Training School resumed quickly after the war, but aircraft production slumped.

A prototype Nimbus was produced by the Shorts Gliding Club in an effort to ensure production remained at Rochester.

The 1950s and 1960s saw the expansion of services to and from the Continent until stringent new regulations meant that operators were forced to find alternative premises.

In 1979, Rochester Airport's lease reverted back to the council and soon after, GEC, comprising Marconi and Elliott Automation, took over its management. In 2002, BAE, which had acquired GEC, gave up the airport and its facilities.

Today the airport is managed by Rochester

FLYING LEGEND: Amy Johnson was crowned Empire Air Queen at Rochester

It is also a refuelling stop for military aircraft, as well as the county's air ambulance and police helicopters.

No Planning Required!

Few people realise that they can have up to a 30 square metre log cabin in their back garden with no planning permission, in most circumstances. With this in mind, you have the choice of Living Out's entire standard range of 74 buildings.

Whilst log cabins are available on the internet, you have the disadvantage of not getting the chance to see what you are buying before it is too late. All too often these cabins are of inferior quality and do not appear quite the way they seem on the web site. With Living Out you can come and see exactly what you are getting for your money. The quality of our cabins is second to none, and you can choose from a variety of wall thicknesses from 28mm, 35mm, 44mm, 60mm, 70mm, 90mm and even double walled 44mm for maximum warmth.

Living Out has one of the largest displays of log cabins in the South East of England with a permanent display of over 30 garden buildings.

Because, at Living Out, we directly import our log cabins, we cut out the middle man which enables us to pass these savings on to our customers, making our prices extremely favourable.

When it comes to delivering, installation and base work, Living Out only use their own experienced team, who can provide the whole service from delivery to erection with absolutely no hassle to you whatsoever.

As previously mentioned, Living Out has developed a double wall system for ultimate warmth, which comprises a 50mm insulated cavity sandwiched between two solid 44mm walls. This has proved to be a very popular option for all year round use.

We can also offer multi room cabins, which provide you with a dual purpose building that could include storage, changing facilities, a gym, an office or just a place for the whole family to chill out!

Living Out customers have used their buildings in a variety of ways to include home gyms, poolside changing rooms, music rooms, children's play rooms, teenagers' dens, but most popular without doubt is the home office. The quality of these buildings mean that you are not buying just a summer house, you are actually adding a valuable space that can be used all year round.

To give an example of what your money buys you, Living Out can supply a cabin that is 233 square feet internally, for just £13 a square foot. Now that is true value!

Merger fears at grammars

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

CONCERNS have been raised that two historic grammar schools could be merged because of falling pupil rolls.

There is speculation that Kent County Council is considering combining Chatham House Grammar School and Clarendon House Grammar School, which are both in Ramsgate.

Chatham House was founded in 1797 as a private boys' boarding school by William Humble, under the name Humbles Boys' School, while Clarendon House was established in 1905.

Its most famous pupil was Edward Heath who grew up in Broadstairs and went on to become a Conservative prime minister and lead the UK into the European Community.

It follows plans put forward by the county council to amalgamate Ellington School for Girls in Ramsgate and The Hereson School in Broadstairs due to a drop in student numbers at secondary schools across Thanet.

Restructuring

KCC's School Organisation Advisory Board has launched a public consultation on the proposals.

Laura Sandys, the Tories' parliamentary spokeswoman for Thanet South, said it was important to ensure single sex and coeducation schools remained in spite of lower student numbers.

"While restructuring in our schools is required due to falling rolls I would hope that we can maintain single sex as well as co-education as an option for children in Thanet," she said.

"I have made representation to KCC about the need to maintain parental choice following many letters from parents who were concerned following the speculation about the future of Ellington, Hereson, Clarendon and Chatham House."

She added: "There were also rumours, and I say rumours, that Clarendon and Chatham House grammar schools might merge."

"Again, while I am not at all against co-ed schooling I do believe that parents of both secondary and grammar schools students need the choice of either co-ed or single sex."

A spokeswoman for KCC said: "This consultation is an opportunity for local people to formally voice their opinions."

"All views will be recorded and considered."

On the rumours about the two grammar schools merging, she said: "The position and long-term viability of all grammar schools is very important to Kent."

'Appalling'

The Hereson School moved to its current site in Ramsgate Road, Broadstairs in 2000, but has served the people of Thanet for 100 years.

However, the state of premises and accommodation at over-subscribed Ellington is described as "appalling" on KCC's website.

The school has 11 temporary classrooms, six of which are recent replacements for 25-year-old condemned huts.

Tony Hamson, headmaster at The Hereson School, welcomed the merger plans in a recent newsletter to parents.

He wrote: "Personally, I am extremely excited about the Local Education Authority's proposals concerning the long-term future of the school.

"These proposals will enhance the academic opportunities open to pupils, while strengthening the caring family ethos that is so important to Hereson."

If given the go-ahead, a staged amalgamation would start in September, 2008.

The opening of the Marlowe Academy in Ramsgate in September, 2005, is thought to have had a major impact on pupil rolls in Thanet, because parents were suddenly eager to have their children enrolled there.

It replaced the much-maligned Ramsgate School.

Dave the dolphin could die from propeller injury

THE dolphin that lives off the coast near Folkestone has been injured, possibly by a propeller.

The dolphin, known as Dave, has become a tourist attraction over the last year, suffered deep cuts to its dorsal fin after being struck by the boat.

Experts fear the mammal, now confirmed as a female, could die if the wounds become infected.

The injuries themselves are not fatal – but a dolphin who lived off the north coast of England died last year after suffering similar injuries.

Scientists later established the cause of that death as infections contracted after wounding.

Jason Carter, of the British Divers Marine Life Rescue, has been warning people for months not to approach the dolphin to avoid it becoming humanised.

He said: "Unfortunately as people are continuing to interact with the animal it is going to be open to more injuries.

"Injuries such as this are open to become infected by people touching them."

Tories condemn 'stain' of forced marriages

PLANS have been unveiled to crack down on forced marriages.

Kent MP Damian Green, the Tories' shadow immigration minister, unveiled proposals for spouses to have to register the name of their potential husband or wife before going abroad.

The Ashford MP said: "The continuing existence of forced marriages in modern Britain is a stain on our social fabric.

"It is the extreme and unacceptable end of the clash of values between a plural democracy which values individual human rights, and belief systems that regard women as second-class citizens.

"Shockingly, forced marriages are not isolated events. The Government's Forced Marriage Unit does some good work but more effective action is needed."

The plans include a declaration of intention to marry abroad.

Potential spouses coming to the UK would have to take a citizenship test.

'If I hit you I won't just break your jaw, I'll knock your head off'

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

THE FIRST time Sarah's partner hit her she was holding their six-week-old daughter in her arms.

Talking to Kent on Sunday, she spoke of the violent outbreaks she suffered at the hands of her "first love", Matt, and how she quickly fell into a second abusive relationship.

"He would go out drinking. When he came back if I said the wrong thing it would be a battering and a kicking into the corner," she said.

She suffered four or five more attacks before the "final straw" came after a New Year's Eve party, she said.

"I had a busted lip, bruises everywhere and I was curled in a corner pleading for him to stop.

"Eventually he did stop. He was saying sorry and trying to mop up all my blood – he said 'you have got to call the police'," she said.

But the abuser cut the phone line with scissors and the next day Sarah called his father who took his violent son away.

Domestic violence accounts for 17 per cent of reported crime in the UK. On average two women a week in the country are killed by a male partner or former partner.

Sarah, who now lives in a coastal town in Kent, has suffered two types of abuse from two men: one left her battered and bruised, the other wore her down mentally until she was a shell of the confident and strong woman she once was.

Abusive

While enjoying a night out in a local pub with a friend, Sarah ran into Matt who begged her to take him back, she said.

"I had a strong character, I said I cannot put up with this and we walked out. He followed me, pulling on my jacket.

"When we got to my friend's house I turned around and he punched me so hard he broke my jaw," she said.

At the hospital, staff called the police and Matt was arrested.

He was found guilty of grievous bodily harm at crown court and despite pleas from his family to drop the case and that she may have to give evidence, Sarah did not back down.

Most women or men who have never suffered at the hands of an abusive partner find it hard to understand why someone would not leave after the first beating.

She said: "I loved him. I really did. It was always the case of 'I'm sorry and it won't happen again'. Then it did happen again but all I

VIOLENCE: Two women a week are killed by a male partner or ex wanted him to do afterwards – and I know this sounds stupid – was to put his arms around me and say he was sorry.”

Sarah was in her late teens when she got involved with Matt and she has not been able to sever all ties with him because their daughter wanted to meet her father.

“I am not going to justify the beatings because that was wrong but he has gone on to be quite a decent fellow.

“By taking it through the justice system it maybe made him a better person. I think he was frightened of the justice system and the police,” she said.

Sarah is now happily married and is starting training this year with Victim Support Kent, specialising in working with people who have suffered domestic violence.

The mother-of-two met her second abusive partner while recovering from the broken jaw Matt had inflicted.

She was sitting in the pub where Damien worked when he noticed her jaw was wired up from the break.

“He asked me what had happened and I explained, I said my ex had whacked me.

“He said that man deserves a beating himself: ‘I would never hit a woman.’ But he went on to be the worst abuser ever.”

Sarah had a child with him and they stayed together for four years.

She said he made her “toe the line” with the threat that “if I hit you I won’t just break your jaw, I’ll knock your head off”.

He wore her down, alienating her from her family and friends and turning her into a “shivering wreck” through constant humiliation, verbal abuse and the threat of violence, she said.

“I remember how at one time I was sitting on the stairs with a bottle of pills in my hands, taking one after another.

“But something inside stopped me – that is how low he got me; to that stage of feeling useless with no self-esteem,” she said.

In the end Sarah moved to Kent to get away from him, but again she still has some contact with him because of their daughter, who is now in her early teens.

She said her experiences have made her stronger and she eventually turned her own life around but if she had support or counselling it would have happened quicker.

“The justice system needs to change because a woman is most vulnerable when she tells the abuser to leave,” she added.

Convictions

A court specialising in domestic violence is now held at Maidstone Crown Court every Wednesday.

Kent and Medway Domestic Violence Strategy Group was created to provide a multi-agency approach to responding to victims of abusive partners.

Its co-ordinator Alison Gilmour said she hoped the specialist courts could be extended across Kent because it was proven to increase conviction rates and decrease victim retractions.

Victim Support Kent is launching a new service for sufferers of domestic violence in the Ashford area and has called for volunteers to come forward to help the victims. Call Wendy Bartlett on 01233 668 871 for more information.

Women’s Aid and Refuge run a 24-hour domestic violence helpline. Call 0808 2000 247 or visit www.womensaid.org.uk.

Kent on Sunday asked Kent Police asked for county figures on domestic violence, but the force failed to provide them.

Bloom movies cashing in CANTERBURY-born Hollywood star Orlando Bloom has been revealed as the UK film industry’s top money maker.

The 30-year-old actor’s films raked in £2.64 billion at the box office.

They include the Pirates of the Caribbean series, Troy, the Lord of the Rings trilogy and Kingdom of Heaven.

Bloom has also topped Cosmopolitan magazine’s Eligible Eleven survey to be voted British women’s most desirable date.

Actors and directors were rated in terms of box office earnings over the last five years in the lists compiled by the UK Film Council.

Hunt for robbers

POLICE have appealed for witnesses after masked robbers struck at the Argos store in Maidstone.

Two men wearing balaclavas ran up to staff as they were opening the store on London Road and forced them inside.

The robbers demanded money from the store’s safe, which was handed over.

Officers said they escaped with a large amount of cash after the incident on Saturday.

The men, both black, were dressed in black tracksuits, wore leather gloves and were in their mid 20s, police said.

Train losses mystery

EUROSTAR says it is unable to disclose details of its financial losses for last year.

Kent on Sunday asked the train firm for the figures after it emerged Eurostar UK Ltd recorded a loss after tax of £123.7 million in 2005 and £276.7m in 2004.

A spokesman for Eurostar said the financial losses for 2006 have not been filed yet. He said they would be disclosed later this year.

In an article in Kent on Sunday earlier this month, Eurostar’s chief executive Richard Brown defended its decision to reduce services from Ashford International by saying the firm was running at a loss.

KENT ON SUNDAY

COMMENT

Having our EU say

SIX out of 10 MEPs in the South East are in favour of a referendum on the EU reform treaty – and they are not alone.

In June, an ICM poll showed 80 per cent of the public wanted a vote on the treaty. A Populus survey found 83 per cent supported the idea.

The British Government has previously pledged that it would back a referendum on a European constitution, but the treaty, they argue, is different.

It may be different in name, but in substance it is strikingly similar.

For example, the EU reform treaty replaced the notion of a foreign minister, as put forward in the constitution, with a 'higher representative', but it could be argued that they are one and the same thing.

It is not really good enough for the UK Government to say that because they have been democratically elected they can be trusted to decide upon the merits of the treaty.

The public have been promised a chance to give their opinions on the future of Europe and a referendum on the treaty would provide the perfect opportunity.

Feeling the effects

THE news that £200 million has been wiped off a pension fund for tens of thousands of public workers in Kent – in just over a week – is clearly worrying.

But it needs to be remembered that the scheme is still worth billions of pounds – and pensions already being paid out are not at risk.

It can only be hoped that the financial crisis that began in America does not further damage the UK's markets and lead to wider repercussions for the domestic economy here.

OPINION:

County's divided wealth

DAMIAN COLLINS looks at our communities and how to help them grow

IT wasn't just the beauty of its countryside that led to Kent being called the 'Garden of England', but the quality of its produce. The hard work, initiative and creativity of people in Kent have made it famous.

Looking at Kent today, it is the wide gulf in levels of prosperity in different communities that gives you the best insight into the health and wealth of our Garden.

Government information based on local communities shows that in parts of Margate, Folkestone and Sheerness we have some of the most deprived areas in England, whereas Dunton Green and Riverhead near Sevenoaks, is one of the top 20 least deprived, out of over 32,000 neighbourhoods surveyed.

So the question is, how we can target support into the areas that really need it most, and what kind of support should it be?

When you walk through an area where the local economy is struggling, you often notice the number of closed down and sometimes boarded up businesses. It is no surprise that the poorest communities in England often have the fewest number of trading businesses. This is important for several reasons. Community businesses help bring people together, they train and employ local people and use local services.

You might think the tax and regulation system would help these types of business and to provide incentives for people to set up in deprived areas. In fact it is often the reverse. Fifteen new business regulations a day have been introduced over the last decade and the costs of regulation are five times higher per employee for small businesses compared to larger ones.

At the last Conservative Party

'Community businesses help bring people together, they train and employ local people and use local services' conference, I proposed a policy idea called 'Acorn Areas' to help support community businesses in deprived urban areas, and isolated rural communities. 'Acorn Areas' would be nominated by local councils, and businesses in these areas would qualify for tax breaks and enjoy a lighter regime of regulation. The conference voted for this idea to be considered as part of the Conservative policy review.

The 'Acorn Areas' idea has been taken forward as part of our new report on 'Social Enterprise Zones', which has been supported by Greg Clark, the Shadow Charities Minister, and MP for Tunbridge Wells.

The overall purpose of the zones will be to make it easier to set up and run social enterprises in the neighbourhoods where they can do the most good.

Social enterprises provide opportunities for local people often through business, education and training and reinvest their profits back into the community. They can bring new life into areas of deprivation and begin to turn them round, but too often they lack access to the funds they need to start up or to grow. Within these new zones, whose location would be recommended by local councils, cash incentives would be provided to bring investors together with social entrepreneurs in the areas where they can make the biggest difference and there would also be a simpler planning system to make applications easier.

A community bank would be established to channel funds for projects, allocate benefits from tax relief and to advise social enterprises in applications for grants and other funding.

These zones could also help existing projects. In Kent this could include the schemes supported by Kent County Council through its Supporting Independence Programme, specific social enterprises like Focus to Work in Margate and organisations like the Folkestone Enterprise Gateway.

If you would be interested in reading a copy of the Conservative Party's report, please email me at damian@damiancollins.com.

• Damian Collins will be standing for the Conservative Party to be the MP for Folkestone and Hythe, in place of Michael Howard, who is retiring at the next general election.

Jaunts costs us

Your article about the South East England Development Agency's trip to Cannes (KoS, August 12) informs us that at least £250,000 has been spent over the last seven years by the quango on staff expenses attending an annual property convention in the South of France.

Their spokesman attempts to justify this expenditure by saying it will secure future investment to enable the development of massive housing projects in Ashford and Northfleet to proceed.

But he couldn't say how much investment had been secured to date. Perhaps Pam Alexander, the chief executive of Seeda, who was also on this jaunt, could tell us?

What is more worrying is that Gordon Brown has recently informed us that the South East England Regional Assembly will be merged into Seeda by 2010, and they will then be responsible for the planning of our transport and housing, without any accountability from elected councillors.

These quangos have been set-up as institutions of government regions directly accountable to the European Union in Brussels. They are unelected and unwanted and will eventually replace our county and district councils.

Expect a lot more jaunts in the future, at our expense.

Despair for nation

The recent outcry over drink-fuelled crime will resonate with anyone who's been out in a town centre on a Friday or Saturday night recently.

Large groups of ill-educated and Arms investment is 'unethical'

Nick Vickers pointed out last week that BAE Systems, a company that Kent County Council has £13.9 million invested in, cannot be described as unethical as only a fraction of its dealings are military.

He is absolutely correct to state that arms are only a fraction of BAE's business, but this fraction is a rather large fraction – accounting for 75 per cent of its total sales.

Kent Greens have started a campaign to put people before profit and to get KCC to rethink its moral duty. As a start to the campaign we have set up an online petition that we urge people to sign. It is available at www.maidstone.greenparty.org.uk.

inebriated young men, often dressed in sportswear with earrings and shaved heads, lurch around the streets looking for fights.

I feel despair for the future of our once great nation.

Maybe it is time we brought back national service so these unbridled young thugs could be taught some lessons about discipline, restraint and respect for authority.

And maybe a short tour in somewhere like Iraq or Afghanistan will educate them about how lucky we are in Britain.

Loans to the letter

We paid off our daughter's student loan months ago with a building society cheque – or at least we think we did.

No receipt, acknowledgement or statement has been received.

I've again contacted the Student Loan Company which says it will only send out a statement once a year.

So a year later we may find the cheque has not reached its destination.

I would urge anyone with a student loan and the parents of those with student loans to write to our Scottish Prime Minister, urging him to abolish these loans as has been done in Scotland and to ensure that the Student Loan Company answers in writing every inquiry.

Well done KoS

I think that Kent on Sunday is a fabulous newspaper. For the last few years, it has been one of the highlights of my weekend.

I used to read national newspapers, but they seem to be all the same these days, with no real individuality any more.

They always seem to be full of doom and gloom and I'm not sure I actually trust what they report.

But KoS is completely different with interesting news stories, well-written features and great sports coverage. What a breath of fresh air!

Well done everyone and keep up the good work.

Love handles plea

Vladimir Putin may be one of the most powerful men in the world, but he's certainly not the most good-looking.

His topless holiday photographs – showing off a honed physique – actually made me feel a little sick.

I prefer men who are from the real world – with some love handles and a beer belly.

Fight for your rights

The Government's plans to take away our rights to have a meaningful say over what gets built in our neighbourhoods would spell disaster for Folkestone.

It wants to take away our right to say if we want big developments including incinerators, nuclear power stations, airport runways, road expansions, and big out-of-town supermarkets built in our backyards.

That's why Folkestone Friends of the Earth will be out on the streets of Folkestone asking people to voice their determination to stand up for their rights to have a say in local development.

Come and join us and stand up for your right to decide what kind of environment you live in.

Could do better

I travelled on the Eurotunnel for the first time last weekend and thought I'd share my views about the experience.

The outbound journey was interminable. From my home in Ashford, it took us nearly three-and-a-half hours to get to Calais.

On the ferry, it has taken around two hours, sometimes less.

We went on a Saturday in August – the height of the holiday season – so we knew it would be busy.

But the series of technical faults that delayed our outbound journey added to a sense of frustration about the experience.

On the way back, it was much quicker. It took barely two hours door to door. The trains were clean and smooth and felt quite safe.

My verdict is "quite good, but could do better".

*K Smith

Praise for PCSOs

Medway Tories voted against increasing the number of PCSOs as recently as last year, so it is a bit surprising to hear that now they are calling for more police.

In my experience, the changes made by police are making a big improvement in people's lives in my ward. In fact, I have heard a lot of praise for the new neighbourhood police officers and community support officers in the centre of Rochester and Chatham. Residents have complimented the police for the way they have helped to resolve disputes and tackled some of the antisocial behaviour which has been a blight on the lives of residents.

A MEDWAY college and university have teamed up in a 25-year project. The agreement between Mid-Kent College and the University of Kent will mean students can use the award-winning Universities at Medway campus. They will have access to the flagship £7 million Medway Building. Some of the funding for the 'multiversity' came from the Learning and Skills Council and the deal was finalised with the college handing the university a cheque for £2.5m. The college has just bought land for a £76m campus at Prince Arthur Road in Gillingham, together with the public park which will lie between the new college campus and the Universities at Medway campus. Ian Rule, Mid-Kent College's finance director, said he was delighted with the "unique" agreement.

Science call

STUDENTS should be handed a golden carrot bursary of £1,000 a year to get them back into engineering and science courses, according to the CBI.

Over the past quarter of a century, the number of students taking courses in physics at A-level has slumped by 57 per cent, and chemistry by over a quarter, in favour of more glamorous courses.

The employers' organisation is now demanding the Government takes action to reverse the worrying trend. It said if companies cannot fill their vacancies with UK staff, it would bring them in from abroad.

The CBI has developed a five-point plan to encourage students back to the sciences.

This includes breaking up the current general science course for the brightest pupils aged 14 and over; more specialised careers advice promoting the sciences, and bringing in more specialist teachers to teach what are known as STEM subjects, science, technology, engineering and maths.

You can make a new life, too

A YOUNG man has turned his life around with the help of a charity.

Tony Porch, 21, was previously unemployable because of problems with drink, drugs and crime.

But a year with the Shaw Trust charity helped him take control of his destiny and become one of just 200 inspirational success stories spotlighted at the trust's South East Celebration of Achievement event.

Mr Porch, from Sittingbourne, said: "I've got my first ever job, a girlfriend, a son, a goal and ambition. I couldn't have it any better than I've got it now."

Stewart March, his new boss at Marsh Electrical, said: "He's a great worker."

Mr Porch took part in the First Base programme, delivered by the trust and Canterbury College and funded by the Learning and Skills Council.

Mr Porch added: "I've never had a good year until now. I started getting into trouble with friends when I was a lad and I just went downhill fast, until I got a three-year probation and then nearly killed myself."

"I was out of my head, punched a window and severed two tendons, an artery and a nerve."

"The probation meant I was put in touch with Shaw Trust, and ever since I've had no problems. I don't do drugs, or drink or get angry."

"In the old days, I was on disability benefits and I didn't want to work. I had nothing to focus on and nothing to live for. Now I have everything. I've changed dramatically. I love my work and I look forward to each day. I never ever thought I'd get to this point.

"I'm open about my past because I'm not like that any more. That's not me."

Did he have any advice to other young people who were getting in trouble?

"Don't do it! Get an apprenticeship while you can. I wish I had done it at 16 instead of wasting all those years. I'd be a long way further on now, but I will get there. I'm 100 per cent sure of that."

Mercedes' offer special delivery

MERCEDES-BENZ founded its post-war business on the E-Class and its predecessors in the centre ground of executive motoring.

But it is under pressure these days from the latest Audi A6 and yet another driver-pleasing BMW 5-Series.

So, Mercedes-Benz is taking the rare step of launching a special edition; the E-Class Executive costs £28,515, £677 less than the diesel entry model E220 CDI Classic, on which it is based yet carries £2,543 worth of extra kit – representing a saving of £3,220 including VAT over the standard car.

Combined with traditional E-Class residual values, this means annual running costs should be less than those of its BMW 520d SE and the Audi A6 TDI TDV SE rivals according to industry fleet statistics.

That extra spec includes: telephone pre-wiring and control via the multi-function steering wheel, six-disc CD changer with MP3 compatibility, 16-inch spoked alloys, Artico leather-look seats, floor mats, two-zone climate control and electronically-adjustable front seats.

Fabia's ugly sister gets sexy new look

SKODA'S first Fabia was successful, but hardly a looker and its estate sister looked even frumpier.

This time around both sisters are far more attractive and the new estate will also carry more – it is longer and taller.

There is a choice of six engines – three petrol and three diesel – and Skoda has been quick to equip this workhorse with lots of storage trays, hooks and cubby holes plus a boot roller cover with automatic quick release. With one touch the cover is retracted making loading and unloading quick and easy.

Surf's up for VW's 60th

WE rarely make a fuss about vans in First Gear, but VW is celebrating the 60th anniversary of the launch of its revered Transporter – in various forms, now enjoying cult status with the surfing and motorhome communities.

Legend has it that the original T1 or 'Bulli' – as fans call it – was based on a factory run-about cobbled together at Volkswagen's Wolfsburg factory.

This went on to inspire a further four generations and all will surely take part in the global convoys, cavalcades and meetings that will celebrate this milestone.

HYUNDAI hopes that shadowing the rise of the so-called Apple iPod generation can bring a rush of new customers.

Starting with the new Ford Focus-class i30 model arriving on September 1, the Korean brand will launch a spate of new models using the 'i' prefix.

It might look presumptuous to link your products with some of the funkiest electronics products ever, especially as previous Hyundais have been reliable and well-priced, but rarely cutting edge technically or visually.

But the company – a giant in global terms – has already shown that it can do radical overhauls; its Kia subsidiary has completely revamped and modernised its line-up in just two years, with no sign of a let up.

Kias like the Picanto, Ceed hatchback, Sedona and Carens people carriers stand comparison with some of the best European rivals and the same vehicle platforms and engines are about to be deployed to transform the parent brand's line-up.

Before you ask – iPod/MP3 player 'connectivity' comes as standard on the i30 and shows a fair bit of thought went into the installation.

The USB and Aux MP3 jacks are in the centre console armrest with a neat 'pocket' to hold the player securely rather than floating around in a glovebox or loose in the car.

This attention to detail is also indicative of the way Hyundai has gone about presenting the i30 to a highly competitive and crowded sector.

Like its Kia Ceed half-sister, the i30 majors on its 'designed and built for Europe' origins and will soon be produced at an all-new plant in the Czech Republic... conveniently, just over the border from the Ceed plant in Slovakia.

For now though, the i30 is built on home turf and the material and quality levels are

Hyundai has eyes on iPod generation impressive. There is a lot of the Ceed about the roomy interior, but that is no bad thing as the Kia impressed market watchers and scared rival European manufacturers on arrival.

Predictably, it also feels much like the Ceed on the road; a decent all-rounder in which responsive handling is balanced by ride quality and comfort. It is not the greatest drive, but it is certainly not dull.

As ever with Korean marques, the car also comes generously equipped as standard: steering wheel mounted audio controls for the six-speaker system, alloys, heated door mirrors, front fog lights, glovebox cooler, air con, luggage net and hook in boot, seatbelt warning and traction control are included.

This combines with pricing and the famous Hyundai five-year warranty to make it extremely competitive against Ford Focus class rivals.

Hyundai expects to sell more 1.4-litre petrol i30s to customers attracted by the £10,995 lead-in price, but the 1.6-litre is a temptation too, while the 1.6 diesel is the pick for smoothness and performance with economy – a sporting 2.0 diesel option arrives soon.

SEVERAL theories come to mind to explain why Nissan named its new family hatchback after a nomadic Asian tribe – the Qashqai.

First, that Nissan itself has been stumbling about in the wilderness looking for sustenance in this tough market sector – people got bored with the Sunny, while the Almera at least kept things consistent.

Second, that the Qashqai is expected to put itself about a bit; it replaces two models – the Almera and the larger Primera – and fancies shots at the compact SUV (sports utility vehicle) and midi-MPV/people carrier sectors too.

Third, Nissan chose 'Qashqai' because all sensible name options were taken up and registered by other car firms years ago; Austin Rover paid Ford a fortune for the 'Montego' name – didn't do it much good though – and how else do you explain Kia choosing 'Ceed' for their Ford Focus challenger? Cheapskates.

Fourth? Well, there was this rumour that someone had a bad cold at a marketing team brainstorming. After several loud 'Qashqais!' the whole naming panel was screaming: "That's it! You're a genius!"

But Nissan refuses to acknowledge any of the Nissan's nomad has right to roam above; the official reason for association with nomads is that the Qashqai writes its own rules and lives anywhere – town or country.

With two-wheel drive or 4x4 options and looks that mix streetwise hatch with a dash of off-roader, it can be family hack, rep's motorway muncher, rural runabout or school bus.

While it looks bigger, its 'footprint' is no more than a conventional family hatch, yet it offers more boot space.

And junior engine and trim options are priced to compete (from £13,499) with everyday hatchbacks like the Ford Focus and Vauxhall Astra.

But the Qashqai also appeals to people who want a high-riding car with lots of space and flexibility without succumbing to midlife crisis and a mid-size MPV or people carrier. Ugh!

In addition, keenly priced yet specc'd up 4x4 versions can attack small SUVs like the Toyota RAV4 or Honda CR-V.

But most sales should come from humbler two-wheel drive Qashqais and these feel nimble, ride better and concede little in handling and grip in normal on-road conditions, though both layouts deliver a good ride and tidy cornering without the lean associated with taller cars.

The Qashqai's distinctive exterior is matched by a smart interior; Nissan cabins used to be functional and durable rather than showcases of design and materials, but the brand has really gone upmarket this time. And loaded on the goodies; Bluetooth hands-free 'connectivity', electric windows all round, air con, glovebox cooler and alloys are all standard.

Mid-range Acenta spec on our test car brings a six-CD in-dash autochanger, cruise control, electric folding mirrors and rear parking sensors, for instance.

Seating is comfortable and far from the garish styles used vainly to raise the profile of cars like the Almera.

Clever interior stowage includes a storage drawer under the front passenger seat and sliding front armrest with deep CD bin beneath, but ugly uncovered cup holders on centre consoles is a pet hate of mine.

Interior space is superb for all, made better on the test car by the airiness of the fixed glass roof (£700 option) extending over the heads of rear passengers, though there is an electric blind to reduce the light.

The 2WD 1.6 petrol version opens the range and is likely to remain the best-seller, though I really rate the 1.5 dCi diesel equivalent tested here.

This low emission engine, from sister company Renault, is an established star and worth the £1,100 premium over the 1.6 petrol if you cover many miles – it is lively and a six-speed gearbox helps it average more than 50mpg.

There are also two-litre petrol and diesel units – the likely choice for those who must have that £1,600 4x4 option.

New registration special feature

Market starts to motor as confidence returns

AFTER a tentative start, new car buyers have shrugged off economic uncertainty, a change of PM and rising interest rates to suggest a reviving market by the end of this year.

Registrations last month were nearly five per cent up on July 2006 and motor industry chiefs at the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders (SMMT) have now added 20,000 new cars to their forecast for 2007 – modest expansion to a total of nearly 2.4 million.

SMMT chief executive Christopher Macgowan said: “Trying to predict the spending habits of the motorist is as tricky

by

as forecasting the British weather.”

But he added: “In spite of interest rate rise concerns and the traditional quiet holiday period, new car registrations have exceeded expectations. Interestingly, diesel cars took a whopping 41.2 per cent share of the total registrations, which should help government and industry with their CO2 reduction targets.”

After being knocked off the number one slot in June by the Vauxhall Astra – a rare event – the Ford Focus was back in pole position for July’s registrations race and VW’s elegant Passat made a rare top-10 appearance to become the month’s best-selling diesel and help eject the BMW 3-Series from the exclusive top slots.

But people carrier or MPV demand was the real sales story; volumes were up 34.2 per cent for the month and 16.4 per cent over the year-to-date, powered by the success of Ford’s facelift C-Max model, its sporty seven-seat S-Max and Vauxhall’s Meriva and Zafira – the nation’s best-selling MPV by far.

The good news for the economy though was the recovery of business demand across the board – fleet registrations rose by 5.8 per cent in July after two months of slight decline.

Private demand was also up for a fifth time this year, despite concerns over consumer spending and the impact of higher cost loans – base rates have risen five times in 2007, to 5.75 per cent in July.

The UK top 10 is still dominated by Ford: the Focus was best-seller in July and overall in 2007 so far with the Fiesta at fourth and third respectively, though the upmarket new Mondeo is yet to chart.

The Astra remains the closest rival to the Focus, while the Corsa supermini is nicely poised to overtake and outsell the Fiesta by year end.

The other top 10 megastars to note are the VW Golf (number five for July and this year) and Peugeot 207 (number six respectively), which has regained the ground lost by its 206 predecessor.

DAIHATSU SIRION:
A spacious bargain

PEUGEOT 207:
Sales are rising fast and there is even a stylish coupé convertible

GREEN issues are driving us all to downsize so the smallest market segment has become the biggest selling.

But superminis and city runabouts are not just in demand for their size – they are cars for all eventualities, tackling motorway miles with ease as well as coping with stop/go town traffic.

They can usually carry four adults comfortably now – perhaps even five – and be even more economical through refined small diesels and hi-tech petrol units.

Hardly surprising then they attract buyers from across the spectrum: young families, households needing a second car, first-time car buyers or elderly couples counting the pennies.

And they are spoilt for choice, especially since some manufacturers have taken design cues from the MPV sector to raise interior space and flexibility.

MARQUES TO WATCH:

- CHEVROLET – the five-door Matiz is one of the best city car packages around, while the Kalos is a well-worked supermini designed in Italy by Giugiaro.
- CITROËN – the French marque offers something distinctively stylish for everyone in this sector, from the ultra frugal and compact C1 three or five-door city car, through the popular and keenly priced three-door C2 to the larger five-door C3.

Environment drives us to think small

- DAIHATSU – this Japanese brand is hard to beat for compact value. The Charade city car is available in three and five-door form, while the bigger Sirion shares underpinnings with the Toyota Yaris yet costs less.
- FORD – the teardrop shape Ka is one of the cheapest and most distinctive city cars on the market and the three and five-door Fiesta dominates the supermini sector, while its Fusion sister model attracts those seeking the higher driving position and flexibility of a small MPV or 'soft roader'.

- PEUGEOT – a small car expert, starting with the little 107 and progressing to the supermini sisters: the long-running 206 and the new 'supersize me' 207 that will eventually replace it. All three models are available with three and five doors and there's a slick new 207CC (coupé convertible). For anyone needing easier access, there is also the 1007, equipped with electric sliding doors.
- SKODA – VW's Czech marque offers the all-

SKODA FABIA: Is even better than before new five-door Fabia. It is still excellent value but much smarter than before, well made and cheap to run, especially in diesel form. Skoda jokes now fall flat.

- TOYOTA – once a poor performer in the small car stakes, it is now a leader with the brilliant and tiny Aygo city car plus the stylish second generation Yaris supermini. Both come in three and five-door formats.
- VW – the three-door Fox city car offers incredible value for a car bearing the upmarket VW badge, while the bigger Polo is a quality contender in this sector with top-notch petrol and diesel engines and three or five-door body option. Ask about the forthcoming ultra frugal and environmentally-friendly Bluemotion model.

Plenty of competition to be UK's number one seller

CLOCKWISE (from top): The Ford Focus is the UK's best-selling car while Chevrolet's Lacetti proves exceptional value. Toyota's new Auris is a by-word for dependability and the Citroën C4 is the epitome of French chic.

NOT for nothing is the family hatchback market arena often called the 'Focus sector' – Ford's contender has long been the best-seller by far.

But competition is tougher now and choosing between these recommended rivals won't be easy...

- CHEVROLET LACETTI – one of the larger contenders, this is another all-new Italian-styled model from the former Daewoo, re-branded Chevrolet. The Korean is excellent value and good looking too.

- CITROËN C4 – whether it's the racy three-door, marketed as the 'C4 Coupé' or the stylish five-door, the C4 has definitely taken Citroën up a notch in the eyes of mainstream car buyers.

- FORD FOCUS – the Mark II is a stunning successor to the original. To the Mark I's virtues – driver appeal and style – Ford added even more space, greater engine and trim choice and a more upmarket interior. The estate, saloon and coupé convertible look good too.

- PEUGEOT 307 – a facelift last year has kept Peugeot's mid-range model competitive, helped by a powerful variety of models: three and five-door hatch, estate, people carrier SW and even a coupé convertible. There should be some good deals available too as the 308 replacement is due shortly.

- SKODA OCTAVIA – straddles the family hatchback and larger family car sector, so see our next section for more information.

- TOYOTA – the Corolla used to be the Japanese giant's big seller here, but the shelf life of the name had expired even if the car itself was unbreakable. So, we have a new car and a new name, Auris (Owris) – also likely to become a by-word for dependability.

- GOLF AND BEETLE – same badge, but while the Golf is bought with the head, the retro Beetle is bought with the heart. Check out the turbodiesels – they are hard to beat for smoothness and power – and the latest Golf is now a real driver's car with a GTI flagship to maintain a great heritage.

Classic company car cosies up to compact exec models

THREE AMIGOS: Toyota Avensis, UK built and famed for reliability; Skoda's Octavia is great value with superb diesel engines; the all-new Ford Mondeo is aiming to attack upmarket rivals CARS like the Ford Mondeo and Vauxhall Vectra used to set the pace in the family car market.

They were designed for company car 'user choosers' so they could pound motorways during the week and cope with the family and all its belongings at weekends or on holiday.

But the rise of MPVs, 4x4 SUVs and upmarket compact executive cars have been eroding market share – a pity when cars like the Mondeo are light years on from their predecessors.

The latest Mondeo is stylish, spacious and great to drive with saloon, hatchback and huge estate versions plus many engine options – it is also being touted as a serious rival to prestigious German models.

Other interesting rivals in the family and executive sector include:

- CITROEN C5 AND C6 – the C5 continues a heritage of spacious family hatchbacks and estates from the quirky French marque, while the elegant executive class C6 looks a worthy descendant to the legendary DS range.

- PEUGEOT 407 – quite a change from its ordinary 406 predecessor, the distinctive 'grinning shark' grille makes the 407 stand apart from the rest, while a sleek fastback SW estate version offers extra lugging power. Top-notch diesels boost its appeal.

- SKODA OCTAVIA AND SUPERB – the former straddles the family hatchback and larger family car sector. It is a highly capable hatchback or estate with great diesels, 4x4 options and tempting prices – a VW for Skoda money. The Superb is a left-of-field choice in the executive sector; it might not have the prestige badge – though Skoda's roots were in the luxury sector – but offers lots of comfort at a bargain price.

- TOYOTA AVENSIS – a bullet-proof range of refined saloons and estates that has benefited from upmarket input from the Japanese giant's Lexus luxury brand. Diesel options are attractive.

- VW PASSAT – the latest Passat saloon and estate range is already attacking German prestige rivals, including the products of sister brand Audi. It is a classy package that drives well and offers lots of space. The large scale of the car could persuade some buyers to check out the smaller Jetta lookalike.

NOTHING MOVES YOU LIKE A CITROËN

CITROËN prefers TOTAL

TOUGH STUFF: Latest Freelander from Land Rover is altogether more competent and luxurious than before; Chevrolet Captiva has announced its arrival in UK now with the Captiva SUV

4x4s sales unmoved by environment argument

FOUR-WHEEL drive cars have been criticised for lacking green credentials as the world faces up to global warming, but they are not all 'gas guzzlers'.

Diesel power has cut fuel consumption while boosting low down power and the market has taken to more compact models.

So, despite the controversy, there seems to be no shortage of buyers for the type helped by load-carrying flexibility, improved road manners, high driving position and 'country set' image.

The sector is now dominated by SUVs (sports utility vehicle) or 'soft-roaders', though serious off-road brands like Land Rover still have cachet as well as genuine ability on and off-road.

Here are some 4x4 options:

- CHEVROLET – the General Motors value brand has added the all-new seven-seat Captiva to its line-up. Backed by Chevy's global reputation in 4x4, this should be a winner.
- CITROËN – the French marque has just launched its first ever 4x4, the handsome 5-7-seat C-Crosser, using a low emission Peugeot-Citroen diesel and based upon the second generation Mitsubishi Outlander.
- DAIHATSU – the all-new Terios is a small, rugged and affordable 4x4 that fits in where the original Toyota RAV4 once triumphed, while offering more off-road power.

• LAND ROVER – for many, this is the only off-road 4x4 name and it also includes the luxury Range Rover sub-brand. The line-up opens with the vastly improved second generation Freelander and then progresses to the multiple award-winning Discovery and rugged Defender – the descendant of the original post war 'Landie'.

The Range Rover '4x4 limo' now has a 'sports coupe' sister in the shape of the Range Rover Sport – hard to ignore.

• PEUGEOT – like its Citroen stablemate, the French marque has a Mitsubishi Outlander-based SUV option. The 5-7-seat 4007 is well-equipped and has a silky low emission diesel engine.

• SKODA – the Octavia family hatchback and estate is offered with road-going 4x4, but the VW-owned Czech brand recently added the high-riding Scout version for occasional off-roading.

• TOYOTA – another great 4x4 brand thanks to the rough, tough Land Cruiser models as well as the sporty RAV4, the original 'GTi 4x4'.

• VW TOUAREG – Volkswagen never does anything half-heartedly and this entry into the SUV market is stylish and competent with a massive V10 diesel as one of the engine options. Whisper it, but it is also a half-sister to the dearer Porsche Cayenne.

ALL ABOARD: Seven seats as standard – the Toyota Verso; this year's facelift brought more style to complement the VW Touran's practicality; Citroën's glassy and classy C4 Picasso NEED more space or want to carry more people? Buy a 'people carrier' and forget about the driving experience.

That was almost the rule as the MPV (multi-purpose vehicle) sector exploded in the late 1990s and carmakers rushed into this profitable arena.

But consumers now demand better road manners to go with the higher driving position and interior flexibility. So, newer designs handle better and have continued, along with 4x4s, to make inroads into sales of popular family cars from the Ford Mondeo sector.

Here are some top MPV marques:

- CHEVROLET – the Korean-made Tacuma may be ageing, but it offers excellent value.
- CITROËN – using the Picasso sub-brand, Citroën has become a major player in MPVs and currently offers five models: the bargain basement van-based Berlingo Multispace, the original five-seat Xsara Picasso, the forthcoming C4 Picasso five-seater, the C4 Picasso seven-seater – with its own distinctive style – and the big seven-seat C8.

- DAIHATSU – if you want to break the mould with your MPV choice, then check out the compact and retro Materia.
- FORD – the five-seat Focus C-Max is regarded as the best driver's MPV on the market and has now been joined by the equally entertaining and sporty seven-seat S-Max and a smart second generation version of the bigger Galaxy.
- PEUGEOT – part estate, part MPV, the SW version of the facelift 307 hatchback is one of the nicest MPVs to drive and is available with seven seats, while the company's big 807 is a real spaceship for those who need it. Those counting the pennies should check out the van-based Partner Combi.

- SKODA – the Czech brand took a fresh look at the small MPV market and came up with two cars in one: a car like front end for more driver appeal and a boxy and spacious MPV rear – the 'room' that inspired the new name Roomster. It is typically well-priced.

• TOYOTA – one of the finest seven-seat mid-MPVs comes from the Japanese number one in the form of the aptly named Verso.

• VW – the 5-7-seat Sharan remains VW's flagship MPV, but the facelift Touran can offer the same seating capacity and car-like handling, making it one of the best models in the compact MPV sector.

Commercial rents are up

THE market for commercial property has remained buoyant for another quarter and this has propelled rental expectations to a six-and-a-half-year high.

This is according to the latest Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors' commercial property survey.

RICS South East director Trevor Hines said: "Record rental expectations offer investors some comfort that continued growth will support returns."

"The global economy is supporting the commercial property sector and investor appetite for the asset class has not dried up."

Retail floor space is continuing to become quickly available but this is offset with a decline in new retail development projects.

On the other hand, demand for office and industrial space continues to do well.

Industrial

The outlook remains bright despite the gloom surrounding the sector in recent months.

New inquiries to occupy commercial property rose at the fastest pace in over two years with the biggest step up in inquiries occurring in the industrial market.

A NEW lettings agency celebrated its launch at a Tunbridge Wells hotel.

The town's newest lettings specialist, Durlings, got off the ground at the reception function at the Hotel du Vin.

More than 80 local businesspeople joined founder Caroline Farrant and manager Denise Sexton.

It started trading in May and is aiming to maintain a focus on establishing relationships with clients requiring a high calibre letting, property management and property search operation.

TV star to show businesses how they can clean up

By CHRIS MURPHY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SHE is famous for her ability to spruce up filth-infested homes on TV's How Clean is your House.

But not many people realise the cleaning guru Kim Woodburn is also an astute businesswoman who started out 20 years ago with her own design company.

Ms Woodburn has now been invited to be a keynote speaker at a Business Link lunch in Hythe called Women in Business.

She will tell the audience of her start in business with her handmade knitwear designs and how she later became a famous star of the home clean-up show using her expertise as cleaner with a range of special home-made potions.

The Channel 4 star will be joined by Jo Groves who started the highly successful Kent-based company, Active Digital, when she was just 17.

Some 11 years on, the company, which has its headquarters in Paddock Wood, employs more than 30 people with offices in London and the USA.

Both women will be describing their paths to success and will be giving advice to Kent women aiming to follow in their footsteps.

Business Link Kent provides the information, advice and support women need to start, maintain and grow a business.

South East still creating new jobs, says banker

THE economy in the South East is still expanding, according to an encouraging new report.

Ross Walker, economist at the Royal Bank of Scotland, said: "The South East economy continued to grow at an above-average pace compared with the rest of the UK in July, as has been the case throughout 2007."

Activity

"Companies continued to add new staff to their payrolls, suggesting confidence in the sustainability of demand."

His comment follows the publication of July's PMI Business Survey Data, produced for the Royal Bank of Scotland by NTC Economics.

The report found employment was continuing to rise as it has done for the past 23 months, as business activity continued to increase.

Growth of new orders quickened slightly to a three-month high, from both new and existing clients.

Some costs rose, mainly thanks to higher raw material prices, and these were passed on to customers.

Shop around for child funds

I THOUGHT a review of Child Trust Funds (CTFs) might be appropriate, as in September the children who first qualified for CTF and were able to open a plan are approaching five years of age.

The original voucher is worth £250 which all children get, and then there may or may not have been contributions since, either regularly, or special contributions, such as birthdays and Christmas.

Contributions to CTFs are limited to £1,200 per year.

This means that by September the first children could have had up to £6,000 contributed to the fund on their behalf.

The CTF is available to the children when they are 18, and they will be able to choose what to do with the money.

For this reason some parents, realistic about the choices an 18 year-old will make when confronted with a lump sum, have chosen other methods of saving, such as within their own ISA, so that they can control the eventual spend.

Most parents will have chosen a CTF that has funds invested in the stockmarket as well as other assets that can fluctuate in value.

A quick look at the performance of CTFs reminds us that we shouldn't just invest our vouchers and forget about them.

Many of the CTFs that invest in index tracking funds have performed largely in line with their benchmark, which over the last year means returns of around nine or ten per cent.

Flexible

There are, however, some CTF funds that have not fared so well, and I found one managed fund that has done just 3.4 per cent, so the money would have performed better in cash.

One of the flexible options built into CTF accounts means you can transfer your CTF to another provider.

You should shop around and check the performance on the one you have chosen.

There are at least 13 years to go and the results will vary enormously.

Science Park companies scoop business awards

THE Kent Science Park in Sittingbourne is home to two companies which have scooped top prizes in the Swale Business Awards.

Ecologia Environmental Solutions took Swale Company of the Year and Paul Cowham, MD of SOTA, is Swale Businessperson of the Year.

Ecologia has a team of highly qualified scientists, engineers, chemists and geologists, which provides soil and groundwater treatment technologies to deal with both emergency situations and longer-term, brownfield remediation requirements. In just seven years it has grown from one person to a staff today of 40.

SOTA is one of the region's leading providers of data networking, voice communications, internet technology and application software.

Tracy Manley, chief executive of organiser Thames Gateway Chamber of Commerce, said: "All of our winners displayed a belief in themselves and their products."

SELECTING the right type of IT system for a company can be stressful because of the sheer variety available.

But now a new tool from Business Link should make it easier.

Users first answer a series of questions about the company, and the sort of IT requirements it has, and the online tool does the rest.

The resulting step-by-step guide recommends the type of IT system that will demonstrate long-term value for money, but does not recommend specific brands.

Pardew staying focused on his team

Addicks boss not interested in takeover speculation

By MATT WRIGHT

WHILE many Charlton Athletic fans have spent the last few days speculating on the future of the club's ownership, nothing has been further from the thoughts of Alan Pardew and his players.

The arrival of 12 new players, made up of seven nationalities, has meant frequent introductions have been required around the Addicks' training ground.

Newspapers

And with a start to the season that will comprise six games in the first 22 days of the 2007-08 campaign, the pressure is on for Charlton to gel as a team sooner rather than later if the club's promotion hopes are to materialise.

"What goes on in the boardroom is out of my control," manager Pardew said on Thursday.

"People can say and think what they want, but my job is to prepare the team and we've got plenty to do on that front at the moment.

"We'll see what evolves, but certainly my focus at the moment is on the players, and making sure we make a good start to the season."

PITCH SIDE: 'What goes on in the boardroom is out of my control,' Alan Pardew said

Several national newspapers speculated that the appointment of new financial advisors Seymour Pierce Limited, the same firm that was involved in the takeovers at Chelsea and West Ham United by Roman Abramovich and Eggert Magnusson respectively, meant Charlton were looking for new owners.

But there is no evidence to back up such theories – just as reports, that emerged shortly after the club's relegation from the Premier League last May, that suggested a wealthy sheikh was ready to make a bid for the club, were dismissed and ultimately proved to have no foundation.

Indeed, as one of the most stable boards in the country led by plc chairman and major shareholder Richard Murray, it would be a major surprise if there were any boardroom changes.

The club itself played down the speculation in a simple statement: "The Charlton board would like to clarify that it has hired Seymour Pierce Limited to consider a range of strategic options.

"These include further investment from existing shareholders and/or new investors, and the strategic review may or may not lead to an offer for the company."

Dominant

Back on the pitch, it was a good week for Charlton as Pardew's men passed their first Championship test by looking the better side by far against a pumped-up Scunthorpe United at The Valley eight days ago, even if the dominant Addicks ultimately had to settle for a draw.

And on Wednesday night, Pardew's men did what the club has struggled to do in recent years by easing past lower-division opponents, Swindon Town, in the Carling Cup; the 2-0 victory ensuring a second-round home tie against League Two Stockport County.

That match will take place on Tuesday, August 28 (8pm) and tickets, priced £10 adults and £5 over 60s and U21s, will be on general sale from 10am tomorrow.

Monday will also see all season-ticket holders with Voucher A eligible to purchase tickets for the away match against rivals Crystal Palace on Saturday, September 1 (3pm).

Kent trio in good form on international duty

ENGLAND'S women cricketers continue their summer internationals today with a trio of Kent players in the squad.

Lynsey Askew and Lydia Greenway are both likely to start, but Kent and England captain Charlotte Edwards may be forced to watch from the sidelines with a hamstring injury.

England won the Twenty20 series 2-1 against New Zealand last week, with all three Kent players featuring strongly.

Edwards paid tribute to her two colleagues: "It's been a really promising start to the summer."

"Lynsey was playing club cricket a year ago and now she is opening the bowling for England.

"Lydia has class written all over her and is one of the best players in the world right now."

The team began the six-match

50-over series on Friday, with the second played at Stratford today.

The games against New Zealand, who are third in the world rankings, one place above England, are preparation for the World Cup in 2009.

Edwards said: "It is about building momentum. We have a group of girls here who will take us through to the World Cup. It's important we stay together, but it looks really good for the team."

The three women played a role in Kent retaining the County Championship earlier this month. Edwards is very proud of the feat and thinks there could be more to come.

She said: "It's always nice to win back-to-back because it shows consistency and means the first one wasn't a fluke. We have a really good development programme at Kent and there's a brilliant bunch coming through."

RACING AHEAD: Seat's Jason Plato

Plato puts on the weight and hopes of Brands win

TENS of thousands of fans are expected at Brands Hatch today for what could be a pivotal weekend in the British Touring Car Championship.

Jason Plato leads the championship by 14 points. As the leader he must qualify and drive race one with a 45kg weight penalty, but he is still hoping to improve his position at the top of the leaderboard.

"With the weight penalty it's going to be a very difficult weekend," he told KoS.

"But we are certainly looking to increase our lead, if we don't then we will be disappointed."

After Brands there are just two weekends left in the season, so every race is crucial in the battle for the title.

Even if Plato does well in today's three races the 2001 champion is not thinking about taking this year's crown just yet.

He said: "Barring a total disaster for my rivals it's going to go down to the last race of the season. It's good for the fans and it's great for the championship."

The Seat driver has an outstanding recent record at Brands. He has won five of the last nine British touring car races held there, and it is a track he enjoys.

"Brands is such a great venue for the touring cars. It flows, but is very tricky to get right," he said.

"We always get a fabulous crowd and one of the big advantages for them is that they can see almost the whole way round the track so there is always a great atmosphere."

Current World Touring Car champion Andy Priaulx will also be at the circuit today.

The 33-year-old has never won at Brands and is looking for some extra practice before the World Touring Cars visit next month.

Lady golfers miss out

GOLF: The European team for the 2007 Solheim Cup will be announced in Sweden this Thursday.

The women's version of the Ryder Cup takes place next month at the Halmstad Golfklubb, near Stockholm.

Kent's Karen Stupples took part in 2005, but is unlikely to make the team this time around.

She is still working her way back to full fitness after giving birth in April.

Dani Masters is also likely to miss out. The 24-year-old is currently 54 in the Solheim Cup rankings so would need a wildcard to be selected.

Crusaders comeback

SPEEDWAY: Sittingbourne Spray-Tex Crusaders face back-to-back matches today, buoyed by winning their first match of the season.

They take on Boston Barracudas and the Rye House Raiders in the Conference League at Iwade.

The Crusaders are having a tough season, but in their previous home meeting earlier this month they beat high-flying Oxford in a thrilling comeback.

Sittingbourne were five points down with two races to go, but won the match on a last heat decider.

'It's like the Wild West out there'

By DAVID PRITCHARD

GILLINGHAM boss Ronnie Jepson believes referees should use more common sense after watching his side collect three red cards in the first two games of the season.

Efe Sodje got his marching orders in midweek against Watford and in the first game of the season both Ian Cox and Steve Lomas saw red.

Despite this Jepson says the team are not being overly aggressive.

"If they were going in over the top in tackles or bashing people with their elbows I could understand it, but it hasn't been like that," he said.

He acknowledges the officials have a difficult job to do, but at times thinks they do not exercise enough flexibility.

"Referees can't win to be fair but it's like the Wild West sometimes, they draw the cards out that quick it's frightening.

"They have to go by the rules because they have an assessor sitting in the stands marking them. The only thing I think is missing is a little bit of common sense at times and understanding the game and the pressure the players are under."

Jepson believes the decisions to send off

Jepson bemoans referees over red card treatment

OFF YOU GO: Efe Sodje (left) received his marching orders against Watford, Gills' third player to be sent off this season along with Steve Lomas (centre) and Ian Cox (far right) both Cox and Sodje were unlucky and would not have been red card offences a few years ago. He maintains his side are honest and highlighted a moment against Watford on Tuesday night to demonstrate.

"Craig Stone cleared the ball and one of their lads came through and caught him, but Stoney being honest or naïve – you can call it either – didn't go to ground.

"There was a similar one at the other end and the lad went down holding his ankle and we've had a yellow card and the lad's jumped up again. The last thing I want to tell my players to do is dive around and try and get others booked. I think there is a little bit too much of that in the game nowadays. It's not for the good of the game."

Although Gills currently have the worst disciplinary record in the country so far this season, Jepson says he will not be asking his players to change.

"You can't ask a player to go out there and be careful when they make decisions. Football isn't like that, it's about passion and desire."

Canterbury star CATHY GILLIAT-SMITH gives an exclusive insight behind the scenes with England's squad at the EuroHockey Nations Championship

Inside view

with CATHY GILLIAT-SMITH

SO HERE we are, no turning back now. We are at the gates and we must deliver. With less than a year to go until next summer's Olympic Games in Beijing we are hoping that the European Nations Cup will provide us with the quickest route to getting there.

Personally, I am feeling massively excited. Having missed out on last September's World Cup I am delighted to have gained my place back in the squad and am hoping to produce the goods when it counts, especially in front of a home crowd.

I had a good tournament in Azerbaijan back in June, scoring a few goals and playing to the strengths of my game. I have also scored recently in practice games against Scotland, so I feel my preparation has been as good as possible.

As the nominated home country to qualify within Great Britain, England are setting their sights on winning a medal at the Europeans which began in Manchester yesterday.

Doing that will guarantee a place in Beijing and give us the opportunity that every sports person strives for – the chance to compete against the world's best at the Olympics.

Having trained extremely hard over the last 12 months we began our European campaign against Ireland yesterday and play Italy tomorrow.

To be honest we aren't thinking much further ahead than Italy right now. It would be too easy to look ahead at supposed 'key games' and be thinking about results. But we have given too much of our precious time to slip up in such a naïve way. The plan is to take each game as it comes, carefully employing our team tactics so that results take care of themselves.

After the Italians our final group game is against Holland on Tuesday. Then who knows? We very much hope that if everything goes to plan we will end up in the semi-final on Thursday which gives us two chances to win a medal.

Making the final would be a dream. You definitely take a European medal home that way, and of course it would mean we had definitely qualified for the Olympics!

So what's the feeling like in the England

Team spirit will help us reach goal

Picture: ADY KERRY

READY FOR OFF: Cathy Gilliat-Smith

camp? Having arrived in Manchester on Tuesday and gone through our last training sessions I can safely say the whole team is very excited.

The stands, banners, flags, marquees etc are all in place at the pitch and every time we step on it in training we are all imagining what it will be like on match day.

I have been imagining the crowds, the opposition, the noise and the adrenaline pumping, ready to go. Having friends and family among the crowds will spur us on that extra inch and make the difference.

Of course there is a range of experience (and age) within the team so any pre-tournament nerves can easily be settled by just chatting to any one of 'the oldies'.

Having spent so much time together over the last few months, we are a tight bunch of people who stick together through thick and thin.

We certainly have a dynamic team spirit. A couple of recent team events have resulted in heavy laughter and smiles.

It definitely makes a huge difference to how we feel, not only spending so much time together, but also demanding so much from each other both on and off the pitch. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, so it's important we enjoy everything we do.

Also there is a great feeling of belief within the team right now, belief in what we are aiming for, belief in how we have prepared and belief we can achieve it.

Just simple belief in each other counts for a lot, especially in testing times which I'm sure there will be a few of during the next six days.

There is a huge amount of talent within our squad of 18 and the tough thing is that only 16 will play in each game.

There is natural disappointment for the two who get to warm up and then watch, but they are still as much a part of the team as the players on the pitch.

They have ensured the 16 who play are the absolute best they can be and then they support them from the sidelines.

It's amazing how a team can be so together even when they are apart.

So here we are, Manchester August 2007 at the European Nations Cup.

We are ready. We believe.

Fleet's new lion

FOOTBALL: Ebbsfleet have signed former Millwall defender Michael Bostwick.

Boss Liam Daish made the move after two players were injured in the first two games of the season.

He said: "In the space of four days we have lost two key players."

"We needed to bring in someone new because another serious injury would leave us stretched. Michael can provide cover at the back but he can also do a job in midfield, so he is the ideal player for us to sign right now."

The 19-year-old spent most of last season on loan at Conference side Crawley. He joined Rushden & Diamonds in January, but was unable to establish himself in the first team.

The cover is needed as Gary McDonald has a ruptured Achilles tendon and Neil Barrett has damaged ankle ligaments.

Crusaders gain win

TRIATHLON: Sittingbourne Spray-Text Crusaders face back-to-back matches today buoyed by winning their first match of the season.

They take on Boston Barracudas and the Rye House Raiders in the Conference League at Iwade.

BATTLE AHEAD TO AVOID DROP

Bad weather leaves Kent facing fight to remain in top division

KENT have just four County Championship games to preserve their Division One status after rain ruined any chance of a win against Warwickshire.

Coach Graham Ford described it as a "disaster" after the weather completely wiped out the first two days' play at Edgbaston.

Speaking after play was abandoned for the second day in succession, he said: "It's very frustrating at the moment. The guys just want to go out there and get stuck in, but instead we are standing around watching the rain."

"It's a disaster, we have to play as much as we can and get results."

As Kent on Sunday went to press the game was heading for a draw. The result would mean Kent miss out on a priceless 14 points for a win.

While the rain hampered Kent, it was helping their rivals Surrey who were playing title-chasing Durham.

With Surrey set an improbable 447 to win in the second innings, the rain meant Durham were unable to get the 10 wickets they needed for the win. Surrey escaped with a slightly fortunate four points for a draw.

Kent's game against Warwickshire echoes the reverse fixture in June, when rain at Canterbury denied them a certain victory.

After dominating the match Kent needed three more wickets for a big win, only for the final 70 overs to be washed out.

Ford said tension was mounting in the camp, especially after the heavy defeat to Surrey a week ago left Kent in the bottom two.

"Obviously we are concerned with our position. The game against Surrey was disappointing – they were the side we would have liked to have kept a buffer between."

"The boys are under pressure right now, but every time it has happened this season they have responded pretty well. Hopefully there is another opportunity."

By DAVID PRITCHARD

Kent have the ideal chance to score heavily this week, with the visit of beleaguered Worcestershire.

The county have endured an awful season without a County Championship win and their New Road ground flooding twice.

The final three games will be a tougher test as Kent face sides in the top five.

The table appears to show a straight fight between Kent and Surrey to survive against the drop.

Ford insists his side will not be looking out for any other results and will instead focus on their quartet of crucial matches.

"We have got to get on with our cricket and forget about anyone else. There are so many factors that we can't control, we have to worry about what we can control. At the end of the day what will be will be," he said.

Kent's cause is not helped by the loss of key players ahead of the climax to the season.

Darren Stevens tore his groin batting Kent to last weekend's Pro40 victory against Durham. He could be out for up to four weeks, so will be a doubt for the games against Hampshire and Durham.

They will also soon be without any overseas players. The Warwickshire game marked Yasir Arafat's last appearance of the season.

The all-rounder returns home to Pakistan this week to prepare for next month's Twenty20 World Cup.

Sri Lanka fast bowler Lasith Malinga is also set to leave soon as his short-term contract expires.

Ford said: "It is not ideal to be without an overseas player but we have got faith and confidence with the guys that are in the squad."

"We have quality guys, it's a good challenge for us and if we get through it we will certainly be stronger for next season."

Ford is adamant that should the worst happen and Kent are relegated, it will not take the shine off winning the Twenty20 Cup a fortnight ago.

"I don't think that feeling will ever go away, it was very, very special. Every player at the start of the season dreams about winning some silverware."

He added: "It would obviously be a massive disappointment and hurt if we did go down, but no one can take the feeling of winning a trophy away from us."
